Lawmakers Reverse Decision On Farmland Bill

CHARLENE M. SHUPP ESPENSHADE

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In a dramatic turn of events, the House of Representatives reversed their position on House Bill 66 (HB 66) in a 106-89 vote Tuesday after critics claim legislators received pressure from House leadership and the governor's office.

The Senate cleared the bill out of its State Government Committee Wenesday night. At presstime, the bill is on track for a full Senate vote.

This vote marks a reversal of a House vote taken three weeks ago, defeating this bill that has potential to set precedent, essentially disregarding farmland preservation on state-owned farmland.

This bill introduced by State Rep. Jim Lynch (R-Warren County) is set to remove the agriculture use restriction on 22.7 acres of land outside of North Warren, clearing the way for the commercial development of the land.

The projected plan for the farmland is for the construction of a Wal-Mart.

Agriculture organizations who have lobbied hard to defeat the bill are disappointed with the change in decision.

"One hundred fifty-two House Representatives voted against the same legislation only 21 days

THURSDAY	1466	655	847	593
LAST WEEK	1510	638	365	215
LAST YEAR	1595	595	725	959

Compared to last Thursday, slaughter steers sold fully 3 50-4 00 lower The quality of the run was greatly improved as there were a lot more long-fed cattle available The steer supply was heavier as well, with live weights running in the 1300-1450 pound range on the majority of the high Choice and Prime steers, which suited the kosher buyers just fine Finished prices in New Holland are back in the same ranges they were in around the first week of October As most producers remember, prices on October 16th, 2003 in New Holland were as high as 130.50 for high Choice and Prime steers And while the market is not in the 120 00-130 00 range, it's not in the low to mid-70's either (which is where it was the week before Christmas last year) Its funny how these 95 00-100 00 finished markets looked real good to everyone as we were coming up through them, but they seemed to have lost some of their luster as we go back down through the same prices, although, most producers are going to close out the year with a smile on their faces. There were not enough slaughter heifers or Holstein steers on offer to adequately test the market Slaughter cows sold 1 50-2 50 higher when compared to last Thursday. Lighter weight (1000-1500 lbs) slaughter bulls sold 2 00-3 00 lower, with heavier (1500-2100 lbs) bulls trending steady to weak. The Thursday supply included 285 slaughter steers, 121 slaughter heifers, 680 slaughter cows, 110 slaughter bulls, and 270 head of feeder cattle

I want to wish everyone a Merry Christmas and a happy New Year from everyone at the USDA office in New Holland, PA It has been a joy to work around all the wonderful producers here in Lancaster County over the past year, and I hope everyone has a prosperous 2004

Most lots of 40-60 weight pigs have a sliding value from the negotiated weight basis which is calculated on the actual average weight of the load plus or minus 30- 40 per pound Some early weaned lots have a slide of 50-1 00 per pound. Early weaned pigs are under 19 days old Estimated lean value is projected to use slaughter weights with normal confinement feeding conditions Vaccination and health program values are not included but health status should be disclosed.

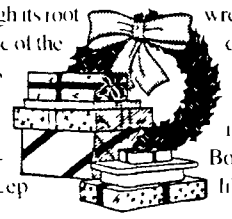
Constancy at Christmas

In the language of flowers boxwood (Buxus sempervirens) denotes constancy. Though its root system is shallow, it is one of the evergreens that shows good longevity as long as you don't plant it in a climate prone to extremes such as the Deep South or northern zones. Cuttings of the boxwood plant are traditional for wreaths, topiary, and other indoor greenery such as ropes and swags—another good reason to cultivate plenty of it in your outdoor landscape. Boxwood is slow-growing but likes to be pruned.



Cinnamon Diamonds

1 cup butter
1 cup brown sugar
1 egg yolk
1/2 tsp. vanilla extract
2 cups flour
1 tsp. ground cinnamon
1 egg white
3/4 cup chopped walnuts

Preheat oven to 350°F. Cream butter and brown sugar; beat in egg yolk and vanilla. Stir together flour and cinnamon and add to creamed mixture. Pat into an ungreased 10x15-inch baking pan. Brush with egg white. Sprinkle with nuts and press them lightly into the top. Bake for 18 to 20 minutes. Cut into diamonds while still warm. MAKES 2 DOZEN.

WIT AND WISDOM FROM THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

- If Christmas Day on Thursday be, a hardy winter ye shall see.
- On Boxing Day (Dec. 26) remember postal carriers, delivery persons, and others who make daily life a little easier.
- For good luck, jingle silver coins when you glimpse a crescent Moon.

OPINION

The Christmas Story

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. (And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.) And all went to be taxed every one into his own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem (because he was of the house and lineage of David), to be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child. And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another. Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us. And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger. And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the child. All they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined.

For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder, and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.

Now Is The Time

To Remember The Reason For The Season

This time of the year it is especially important that we take time to count our blessings.

My wife and I spent six years in Kenya on a mission project in the early '80s, and that helps us understand how wealthy we really are when compared to most of the world's population. I will always remember one farmer who served on the management committee, which gave guidance to our development project.

One time when I picked him up for a committee meeting he mentioned he didn't get much sleep last night. When I inquired about that, he reminded me that it had rained hard most of the night. I acknowledged that, but I was still not sure what that had to do with his problem. Then he reminded me his home had a thatched roof, and grass to repair such a roof was very hard to come by because of overgrazing in the region. His roof leaked so bad the only way his family could stay dry was to stand up between the leaks for most of the night!

This past year we had an abundance of rain, which is a blessing after a drought year but it also caused some damage to some crops. But whenever I experience some problems caused by too much rain, I remember my Kenyan friend and am glad that at least I can be dry when I am sleeping!

We do not need to travel overseas however to be able to assist someone in need. All of us can find a needy family who could use a helping hand in our community. Making an effort to get to know their needs and assisting them as appropriate can help us keep things in perspective. This can be a very valuable experience for our children and will help them to be generous and to appreciate what they have. This can also make some Christmas memories your children will remember throughout their lives. Additionally this can also open the doors to be helpful to this family throughout the year since some situations require long-term assistance.

To Enroll In The Chemsweep Program

Secretary of Agriculture Dennis C. Wolff recently announced that 21 counties have been chosen for the 2004 Chemsweep Program. This program is designed to provide businesses licensed to apply pesticides with the means to properly dispose of canceled, suspended, or unwanted pesticide products.

The counties identified for collections of pesticides in the summer of 2004 are Adams, Armstrong, Butler, Carbon, Clarion, Cumberland, Dauphin, Elk, Jefferson, Lancaster, Lawrence, Lebanon, Lehigh, Lycoming, Mifflin, Somerset, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Tioga, Venango, and Wayne.

Each year, many pesticide products are canceled by the manufacturer or phased out of operations, leaving growers and applicators with quantities of potentially dangerous and toxic materials. In addition, many commercial establishments, farmers and homeowners have unwanted and/or unusable pesticides. Because of the nature of these potentially hazardous materials, often limited options are available for responsible management.

The high cost of disposal prohibits many users from hiring professionals to dispose of these materials and also postponing such disposal decisions until a more cost-effective means becomes available. The waste pesticides may then become a safety hazard and environmental liability through long-term storage in barns, garages, or other areas in and around the home.

"Before Chemsweep began in 1992, there wasn't a cost-effective way for people to dispose of unwanted pesticides properly," Wolff said. "We are now taking the necessary measures to ensure that these chemicals do not harm the environment."

Pesticides control, kill, or mitigate pest organisms and can include herbicides, fungicides, insecticides, and rodenticides. The products are classified as Universal Waste Pesticides and will be collected, transported, and disposed of in accordance with all applicable rules and regulations.

"At no cost to the business, Chemsweep provides central collection sites where people are asked to drop off unwanted pesticides, or the hazardous waste disposal company under contract by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will collect the pesticides directly from the storage location," Wolff said.

For information, visit the Department's Website at www.agriculture.state.pa.us/plantindustry/site or Penn State University's Pesticide Education Program at http://www.pested.psu.edu/pdaprog www.pested.psu.edu/pdaprog. Quote Of The Week:

"Do not be afraid, I bring you good news of great joy that will be for all people. Today in the town of David a Savior has been born to you; he is Christ the Lord."

Editor:

With less than two percent of Americans engaged in farming, each generation is becoming further removed from agriculture. There are many people — children and adults — that lack even the most basic concepts of agriculture.

As a lifelong dairy farmer, I am constantly amazed at how many people cannot tell you where milk comes from, other than from a plastic container at the local grocery store. Agriculture is a leading economic enterprise in the commonwealth, yet a lack of knowledge about agriculture within the general public can be extremely costly to an economic infrastructure that essentially revolves around the industry.

As secretary of agriculture, I am committed to agriculture education, and this includes educa-

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

PROMISES, PROMISES

Background Scripture:
John 14:6-4.
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 1:18-25.

In the past few weeks we have bought a car, had a new roof put on the house, and purchased a computer software program that was supposed to permit us to orally compose manuscripts by talking into a microphone.

Despite the car salesman's "guarantees" that his prices were the lowest in Dallas, we found we could have bought the same car for the same price at three different places. Despite the roofer's promises as to what would happen while we were away, we came home to find a mess that has taken more than a week to rectify.

But the biggest of all disillusioning promises was that of the computer program that assured us that it would work fine after just a day or two of programming it to recognize Valere's voice. We not only couldn't make the program work, but also talked to at least four other parties who had the same experience. Promises! Promises! They don't seem to mean anything.

As you may have noted, those experiences have left me somewhat sour about human promises. As a well-known politician recently told a colleague about whom he had told a vicious lie, "It's only politics, John." So, when I expressed my views of the present ethics of entrepreneurs, I was told, "it's only business, Larry."

By You Or To You

Many of us have known the heartache of broken promises in personal relationships. "I will love you forever." "I'll never do that again." "I assure you it wasn't I who did that."

From your own experiences, I'm sure you can add some additional broken promises that have either been committed by you or to you.

So what promises can we live by? For our own self-protection, must we become thoroughgoing cynics?

Those are timely questions to deal with as we approach Christmas, which is essentially founded upon God's promises. The first of these in Matthew's Christmas story is the significance of the name to be given to him: ". . . and you will call his name Jesus, for he will save his people from their sins" (1:21). In Hebrew, the name was Yeshua, which we can render as either Jesus or Joshua and means "Yahwe (or God) is salvation."

Note that the promise is not to save God's people from temptation, enemies or disaster, but "from their sins." Anyone who becomes a Christian for the sake of avoiding trouble, deprivation, or prejudice is subject to a rude awakening. Christians die in plane crashes, automobile wrecks, sinking ships, collapsing buildings, epidemics, and natural disasters. Christians get cancer, go bankrupt. and even get thrown in jail.

God's promise is not to keep us from the consequences of being human beings, but from our sins, which ultimately are of more consequence than any other disaster. Paul's life was a lot tougher because of his apostleship (see 2 Cor. 11:23-29). And Jesus ended up on a cross!

God Is With Us

There is a second promise and this, too, has to do with a name drawn for Isaiah's prophecy (Is. 7:14): ". . . and his name shall be called Emmanuel" (Mt. 1:23). So far as we know, no one called Jesus by the name Emmanuel during his lifetime in the flesh. But the writer of Matthew identifies Jesus with the Emmanuel of whom Isaiah wrote. The reason for this identification is that Emmanuel means "God is with us."

In the midst of our accidents, diseases, disasters, and tribulations, Jesus represents the promise that God is with us, just as he was with Paul in his tribulations and with Jesus on the cross.

Being a follower of Jesus Christ does not promise us protection from our crosses, but the power of God to overcome them with victory. The good news of Jesus Christ is not that we shall escape human tragedy, but that by the power of God we may see it through. Where is my proof? I have no proof, but I trusted in other promises, believing they were true and they have been proven otherwise. None of the other sources to which I have looked for my well-being have panned out.

That leaves the promises of God to be with me in the midst of life and save me from the folly of my sins. It is on them that I will stake my life and my destiny.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Report Supplied by USDA

SPOT PRICES OF CLASS II CREAM, dollars per lb butterfat. F.O.B. producing plants Northeast: 1.7145-1.9685. Delivered Equivalent. Atlanta 1 7272-1.9812 mostly 1 8415-1 9304

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .8700-.9300 Class III, spot prices: .9800-1.0600.

EDITOR'S NOTE· Due to changes in milk supply agreements, milk import/ export totals are not directly comparable to year ago figures and to shipments prior to April 1, 2003

Regional Milk Market Administrators announced the following, November 2003 uniform prices: Northeast $14.95, Mideast $13.93, Southeast $15.72, Florida $17 47, and Western New York (a state order) $14.72 at the base city or county in the orders. (For the Northeast, Mideast, and Western New York orders, statistical uniform prices are reported.)

Another, less severe, snow storm hit parts of the Northeast this week and some farm pick-up schedules were delayed. Milk output is starting to rebound slightly in the Northeast, but milk supplies remain tight for overall needs

In the Southeast, the milk flow is showing more signs of increasing, but the recent rain and cooler weather are retarding the gains seen the past few weeks. Florida's need for milk was up this week and imports did take place. Contacts report that they are already planning on shipping milk out of state next week when schools are on vacation. This week's reopening of 41 grocery stores closed by strikes, redistributed the Class I milk demand. Surplus milk supplies are still tight, but contacts at manufacturing plants are getting more calls from handlers looking for outlets during the next two weeks Because of the tighter milk supply and current plant capacities, contacts do not feel that the pressure to clear the holiday milk to be too bad.

The condensed skim market ranges from fair to improved. Most sales are to contract accounts, but a few spot sales were noted this week

The fluid cream market has held surprisingly firm early this week Prices are mixed, but generally higher as last week's average CME butter price gained almost 2 5 cents. The multiples used to determine prices did move a little lower to help offset the butter price increase However, contacts feel that the closer we get to next week the lower multiples will become

Production of holiday items like egg nog, bottled whipping cream, dips, and sour cream have slowed significantly. Cream offerings are increasing along seasonal patterns Ice cream production is holding fairly high this week, but many producers will be down during the two-week holiday period starting Monday, 12/22. Churning activity is light, but expected to increase this weekend.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
December 12, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER CATTLE SUMMARY for week ending Dec 12 —ST JOSEPH MO Dec 12 (USDA-MO Dept of Ag Market News) NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER CATTLE SUMMARY Total Receipts 412 900 last week 411 500 last year 430 400 Direct 57 700 last week 52 900 last year 62 300 Video/Internet 32 000 last week 25 800 last year 33 800 Auctions 323 200 last week 332,800 last year 334 300 This weeks auction volume included 37 percent over 600 lbs and 45 percent heifers

Compared to last week feeder cattle and calves sold 2 00-5 00 lower with many instances as much as 8 00 10 00 lower on both calves and yearlings The market took back nearly all of last weeks sharp advances on lightweight calves and really hammered those heavier calves over 550 lbs that had been holding respectable price levels amid moderate demand Yearling prices had been maintaining near record levels, although supplies have been very limited

Over the last two weeks a few more of the heavier feeders have been showing up at the auctions but sellers were shocked this week when their precious yearlings fell on light demand It's as if all at once cattle feeders collectively decided that they can't give over 1 00 for 800 lb steers Hedging these high feedlot replacements against slumping spring futures is impossible Weakness came from all directions this week as significantly lower prices were posted on the futures, beef, and finished cattle markets But, perhaps the most damaging factor to blame for this week's losses on the feeder market was the weather Conditions were miserable in all five of the major feedlot areas as freezing rain, snow, and cold winds reminded cattlemen that winter is only about one week away Frigid temperatures on dry wheat fields across the Plains caused what little forage that was available to crawl back into the ground until February Backgrounders could barely get their tractors started to feed round bales to shivering and hunched-over cattle when their order buyers called on their cell phone to ask, How bout some more of those dollar thirty calves? A quick recovery may be difficult as the holidays will interrupt normal marketing for the next several weeks

Packers are putting off negative vibes and complaining about losing money, after lackluster post-Thanksgiving beef sales caused wholesalers to clam up and refuse dressed beef price lists However, the stock market got back to 10,000 points this week, its been a great year, and Santa Clause is comin'

Maryland Offers Johne's Meetings

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Johne's disease affects dairy and beef cattle and can be financially devastating to producers. Although the economic impact depends on the herd size, commonly cited data for dairy cows, which are more affected by the disease, indicates that 22 percent of U.S. dairies are infected with Johne's disease and, for herds that test positive, the estimated cost is $227 for each cow in the herd.

To help dairy and beef producers and veterinarians learn more about detecting and preventing this disease, University of Maryland Cooperative Extension is sponsoring a series of meetings, "Targeting Johne's: Stopping Johne's Disease from Robbing Your Profits," Jan. 5 through 9, 2004. The program is co-sponsored by the Maryland Department of Agriculture and USDA-APHIS, Veterinary Services.

Dr. Mike Collins, Department of Pathobiological Sciences, University of Wisconsin, Madison and world-renowned expert on Johne's disease will be the keynote speaker. Other scheduled speakers include Dr. Susan E. Williamson, USDA-APHIS, who will discuss Maryland's Johne's disease program, and Dr. Robert Peters, University of Maryland, who will discuss dairy quality and team management.

The registration deadline is Dec. 29 and the meetings are free. The time for each meeting is 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Meeting dates and locations follow:

- Jan. 5 - Chestertown Fire Hall, Chestertown, Md. To register call the Kent County Extension office at (410) 778-1661 or (410) 758-1107 (Delmarva) or e-mail vclrkstn@umd.edu.

Kubota To Showcase New RTV At Farm Show

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Big or small, Kubota will have it all at the 2004 Farm Show.

"We will have everything from the lawn tractor to the ag tractor," said Tom Burton, sales manager. "We will have almost the smallest tractor to almost the largest."

For more than 10 years, Kubota has taken advantage of the Farm Show to showcase their tractors to the public. This year's exhibit will again showcase their diverse line of tractors and their newest vehicle, a rough terrain vehicle (RTV), the RTV 900.

This rough terrain vehicle has been four years in the making, and the Farm Show will be the first time most of the general public will be able to see it.

Burton said that Farm Show visitors will be able to check out the new vehicles and able get a feel for what they can do.

Burton states the focus of the Kubota at the Farm Show is education.

"When people see us with a tractor need (at the Farm Show), we will help them meet that need," said Burton. "People come to our booth to get educated."

Burton noted that the Farm Show provides a great atmosphere for education because it is slow-paced and an easy discussion.

Five dealerships will be participating, working the booth and available for follow-up discussions after the Farm Show.

Kubota will not be participating in the demonstrations on "Farmer Days," but encourages the farmers to stop by their booth.

Burton views Farm Show as a company investment. He said, "We are more forward-thinking and investing into the future (by exhibiting at Farm Show)."

Dear Friends and Customers,

And the angel said unto them, "Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."

Holidays are a special occasion when we can express our sincere thanks to those whose friendship we cherish. At this time of the season we pause to count our blessings. We are grateful for our customers and friends. We thank you for your valued business and loyalty.

We continue to renew our commitment to provide you with quality products and service during the coming year.

May the blessings of peace, health, and happiness be yours through the Christmas season and the coming year. We wish you a successful 2003.

Spectacular Christmas Trees Have Roots In Pennsylvania

KENNETT SQUARE (Chester Co.) — They might not be as famous as the Christmas trees in Rockefeller Center or at the White House, but for Berks County's DeLong Christmas Tree Farm, the Christmas trees they supply each year to Longwood Gardens are every bit as special.

The farm's Douglas and Fraser fir trees are an important part of Longwood's breathtaking holiday display of exquisite decorations, brilliant poinsettias, fragrant flowers, and living wreaths. The lavish floral and tree displays, plus sparkling lights, fountains and festive music, draws a steady stream of visitors to the world-famous Longwood Gardens in Kennett Square, near Philadelphia.

Longwood Gardens, one of the world's premier horticultural showplaces, hosts thousands of visitors to its Christmas spectacular each year. Longwood offers 1,050 acres of gardens, woodlands, and meadows; 20 outdoor gardens; and 20 indoor gardens within four acres of heated greenhouses.

Since 1989, DeLong Christmas Tree Farm has been the exclusive supplier of Christmas trees to Longwood Gardens. Steve Custer runs the family-owned and operated farm in partnership with his wife, Jean, and his in-laws, Tom and Ann DeLong. The farm has been in the DeLong family since 1941.

This year, they provided 47 trees to Longwood Gardens for their annual Christmas display, including two massive trees that top 20 feet. The trees are lavishly decorated and displayed throughout the Conservatory and greenhouses.

The focal point is Longwood's signature tree, a spectacular 20-foot-tall revolving Douglas fir adorned with garlands of silver larch branches and fern fronds studded with red berries and lotus pods and hundreds of red glass balls and metal icicles. It sits in the Conservatory amid a river of brilliant red poinsettias.

Tree selection for the holiday display starts in September when a master gardener from Longwood makes the one-hour trip to the Berks County farm to choose the trees. Armed with a pick list which details the size and variety of trees required, he usually spends a half-day tramping through the farm's neatly ordered rows to find the trees that will meet Longwood's exacting specifications.

The trees are cut in mid-November, and transported to Longwood in four trucks.

While professional designers decorate most of the 47 trees, local elementary schools also participate in the festivities by decorating trees that are displayed in the greenhouses.

"One of the harder parts of the jobs is selecting the trees that will be decorated by the elementary school children," said Steve Custer. "We need to find 24 perfectly matched, 4-foot Fraser fir trees. Longwood demands that those trees be as uniform as possible."

Custer says the weather this year was especially favorable for growing outstanding quality trees.

"The drought and heat of the last few years were tough on the trees. But this year, the weather was ideal. Even though the abundant rainfall meant we had to do more mowing than usual, it provided the trees with excellent moisture as we headed into harvest. An early cold snap provided the hard freeze that the trees needed to stay fresh after they were cut."

In addition to commercial customers, including the Congressional Country Club in Bethesda, Md., DeLong Christmas Tree Farm also has a thriving retail business with trees, wreaths, and stands available in a huge new posals on the farm— to the joy of the Christmas season as people choose wreaths, garland, and precut trees— the 600- acre farm and garden center is abuzz with activity.

"We market the concept behind a Christmas tree," said Veto Barziloski. "You're selling an experience, and they are taking home a tree. The experience sells the tree. (As a grower), you want the tree shopping experience to be a good, positive one."

Veto Barziloski extracts a tree to prepare it for sale as a live Christmas Tree.

> "What is the perfect Christmas tree? Well, the perfect tree is what people like."
> Veto Barziloski

Veto and his wife, Dottie, and children Veto, 21, Adam, 19, and Michael, 17, work year- round to prepare for the Christmas season.

"Christmas tree growing is a full-time, year-round business," said Veto. "Certain aspects of the tree production process are an all- year thing. As for preparing for the actual harvest, we usually start mid-October getting everything ready."

Nick Auiso and Tony Force wrap the soil ball of the tree, preparing to move it to the garden center for sale.

In addition to the local precut, choose and cut, and live (burlaped and balled) Christmas tree business, the Barziloski family also sells trees wholesale in Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York City, New York state, and Connecticut. Trees that are sold wholesale are then re-sold tion to both the farm and non-farm public. I believe that key to agricultural education is starting early so future generations of agriculturists are not hampered by the policies of the uninformed. If we wait for today's youth to grow up, it may indeed be too late.

Farm Plan. A Service of FPC Financial

This summer, I unveiled a multifaceted agriculture education initiative designed to enhance awareness of school-aged children about the importance of agriculture for the economy, community, and life. As part of that plan, I appointed an agriculture education coordinator, Dr. MeeCee Baker, to oversee the program and work with educational institutions, agricultural education teachers, school districts, government officials, and others to get agriculture into classrooms and raise awareness of agriculture in society.

One of the cornerstones of the plan was unveiled in November when the Department of Agriculture launched www.marketplaceforthemind.com, a groundbreaking agricultural education resource for teachers, students, the farm community, and the public. The Website, created through a joint effort between the departments of agriculture and education, is designed to help teachers fulfill state education standards for environment and ecology and science and technology.

In addition to curriculum materials, educators can access information for grants for classroom supplies and equipment, as well as opportunities appropriate for field trips. The resource library provides students with information for school projects, scholarships, higher education, and careers. Moreover, the general public benefits from up-to-date agricultural information, event listings, and current issues in agriculture.

This site marks the beginning of a new approach to education and awareness about agriculture in the commonwealth. As secretary, I am committed to sharing my knowledge about farming and agriculture with school children across Pennsylvania. In the classroom, we take an interactive and hands-on approach to learning. We show students how to make butter. They can taste foods and learn about nutrition. By bringing agriculture to students, they see its impact on their daily lives and are more apt to remember the lessons learned. Through November, I have taught lessons to more than 200 students and I will continue monthly visits to schools throughout the New Year.

All of us — students, consumers, teachers, farmers, government leaders, and the agribusiness community — must work together to educate, and learn, about the importance of agriculture to our community, our economy, and our world. I am confident that through education, agriculture will continue its strong tradition in Pennsylvania.

"Also, dairy farmers are urged to offer their suggestions on how to rectify the situations. Local agribusiness people are asked to illustrate how low milk prices are affecting their business. Consumers are urged to attend the hearing in support of their local dairy farmers."

Senator Arlen Specter and Senator Rick Santorum will have aides attending the hearing. Congressman John Peterson's office will also be represented.

Lunch will be served by personnel from the fairgrounds at a minimal cost. In case of bad weather, the hearing will be on Wednesday, Jan. 14.

The fairgrounds are located just off Rt. 6, halfway between Mansfield and Wellsboro.

Testimony given at the hearing will be forwarded to the National Family Farms Coalition office in Washington, D.C. Anyone that testifies will have 10 minutes to deliver their testimony. Pro Ag urges each one to submit 15 copies of their testimony.

Here are several dairy farmers who have testified:

Mueller: Eastern Dairies Can Compete With Calif.

'Keep It Simple' Says New York Dairyman

WESTMINSTER, Md. — In 1978, George Mueller took a trip with his county extension service to dairy farms in Arizona and California. It was a jolting experience.

"The simplicity of their system was a shock," Mueller said.

He returned to his farm in Clifton Springs, N.Y. with a goal of implementing some of the concepts he saw out west. Twenty-five years later, Mueller has a lot of stories to tell about his experiences streamlining his dairy operation.

Mueller was keynote speaker at the Maryland Dairy Industry Association annual meeting in Westminster Tuesday. His theme was "The Secret To Profitable Dairy Farming In the East: Keep It Simple!" He is founder and senior partner at Willow Bend Farm, a 2,200-acre dairy farm with 1,200 cows.

Originally from the city, Mueller was married 44 years ago to his wife, Mary Lue, who was with him during his presentation. She was raised on a farm.

"I came out of the city and married a farmer's daughter, and that was the best move I ever made," Mueller said.

Mueller, who partners with his son, believes that at least some of the same principles used on western dairies can apply to operations in the east.

While a recent article in a national dairy publication claims that western dairies are producing milk for about $6 per hundredweight less than eastern dairies, Mueller believes that we have some advantages that "California would die for."

These include nearness to markets, feed costs even or lower than those in the west, the benefits of the corn silage/alfalfa rotation, and the (sometimes) abundant precipitation.

Mueller believes in what he calls "a three-legged milk stool" to use as a guide for dairying. The three principles are simplicity, large volumes, and low investment per cow.

"A penny saved goes straight to the bottom line," Mueller said, adapting a line from Ben Franklin.

One way Mueller has saved money over the years is by using old family station wagons as farm utility vehicles.

"One of our little 'secrets' is not to tie up a lot of capital in an expensive, gas-guzzling, 4X4 pickup truck," he said.

The only justification for buying new farm equipment is "you must be sure it is used over many acres the whole season long."

Mueller said he purchased a new $240,000 chopper and $45,000 windrow merger several years ago because he wanted reliable equipment that was able to handle large volumes without breaking down during harvest.

Other "simplification" strategies Mueller has used on his farm include handling sand-bedded manure from the freestall barns by pushing it over what he calls "The Great Wall of Hopewell Township."

The concrete wall is 570 feet long and 13.5 feet high. The manure and sand mixture is pushed over the edge of the wall into the lagoon below. The sand tends to stay near the edge of the pit. After the liquid is pumped out and spread, the solid portion, including sand, can be accessed and spread by loader and "V" spreaders.

"This is simplicity itself," Mueller said of the manure-handling setup.

Mueller said that he has "violated" the principle of low investment per cow several times in recent years, but for reasons he considered valid.

For example, concrete in alleyways is grooved to prevent cow slippage.

George Mueller

Mueller recently built a workshop to service farm machinery, after "spending 40 years fixing equipment in mud and snow," he said. The waste-oil heated building provides a warm, dry place for his field crew to work all winter long.

Mueller kept an eye on efficieny during the recent expansion to a 1,200-cow facility, which was built on top of a hill for ventilation and natural drainage purposes.

The new milking center includes a double-25 parlor. Milk is precooled with well water in a plate cooler. The warmed water is then channeled to the cows, who Meuller said prefer to drink it warm.

Heifers are housed in a 264-foot long, 8-row barn and provided with rubber-filled canvas mattresses. No bedding is used.

Calf hutches are located near the milking center to ease the feeding of waste milk.

Mueller said large and small dairies need each other to make the industry thrive in the east.

"There's no better place to raise a family if you can turn a profit. By keeping things simple and efficient, you can," he said.

"We can compete with the best of California if we keep our eyes on the three-legged milk stool."

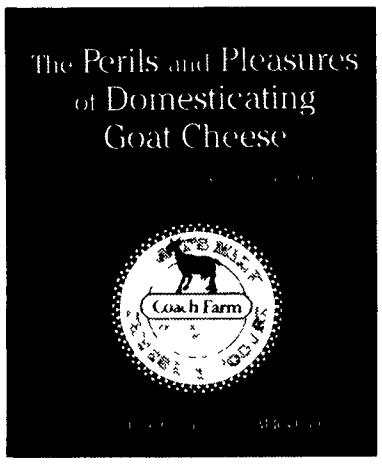
THE PERILS AND PLEASURES OF DOMESTICATING GOAT CHEESE: Portrait of a Hudson Valley Dairy Goat Farm, photos by Julie Cahn and words by Miles Cahn. Catskill Press/ Ruder Finn Press Inc., 2003, 116 pp., $19.95. ISBN 0-9720119-5-1

Perhaps a long time ago, and what certainly seems (to the author of this book) far away, the pursuit of happiness included a leather goods factory in New York City by the name of Coach Bag. Coach Bag worked well for a time — but the owners simply thought that something, somehow in their lives, went missing.

In the fall of 1983, according to the authors, Miles and wife Lillian decided to purchase an abandoned farm in the Hudson Valley (Columbia County), a couple of hours from downtown New York. Why not make a go of it? Why not be farmers? Why not bring in a "couple of goats and start making goat cheese"?

There were successful Coach stores in New York and other cities, and even one in Paris.

Instead of the freedom and delights of living and working in New York in the apparel/ accessory industry, the authors decided to be "virtual prisoners" on their own farm, held "hostage by more than 1,000 goats." They sold the leather goods company to Sara Lee Corporation in 1985 to become goat farmers.



In the very humorous introduction, Cahn makes extensive notes on what would drive normally sane human beings to actually make a living at goat farming.

Along the way, we are given a sincere, no-holds-barred tour of the thinking that went into the creation of Coach Farm Goat's Milk Cheese and Yogurt, and what the owners had to do to ensure that a large commercial farmstead could be successfully converted to a major goat cheese operation that direct-markets its products.

Seems they were successful!

The book notes the critical importance of growing quality hay, which translates to quality milk and cheese; construction of a complex of barns to accommodate the many hundreds of goats; the reproductive and milk generating process as a whole; a photo tour of the facility where the cheese is created; and, even more delightful, suggested serving of the best goat cheese.

"Perils" is a wonderful coffeetable book with great photos and well-written text, a true success story highly recommended for your farm shelf.

LIFE AND RHYMES OF THE AMISH, by Sharon E. Workman. Sharodan Educational Enterprises, 2003, 144 pp., $12.95. ISBN 0-9717437-1-1

Workman has compiled a real treat of poems that speak of the lives of its many contributors — the students, family, and friends of Flat Ridge Elementary School, a public school grades 5-8 located three miles south of Charm, Ohio.

What makes "Life and Rhymes" unique is that contributors include some of the 80 Amish students who attend. The poems recollect the typical daily chores, experiences, hopes, and dreams of the students and of the personalities who make up the community near Charm.

The book has lots of homemade art and feels more like a scrapbook of daily experience. You will enjoy it.

Order from Sharodan Educational Enterprises, 6529 Co. Rd. 201, Millersburg, OH 44654.

Farm Bureau Applauds PMMB Decision

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Boards (PMMB) recent decision to maintain the over-order premium for Class I milk at $1.65 per hundred pounds of milk for the first six months of 2004 will help dairymen get through their struggle with low prices, said the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

"The long-term economic viability of Pennsylvanias dairy farms continues to be challenged by this prolonged period of less than adequate milk prices. Pennsylvania Farm Bureau appreciates the board taking this action to help strengthen the states dairy industry," said Guy Donaldson, president of the statewide farm organization.

PFBs dairy specialist Joel Rotz said the PMMB conclusion was "the right decision for both producers and consumers, who all benefit when our dairy industry is stable." Rotz had testified that prices received by dairymen were expected to continue to be significantly below their costs of production during the first half of 2004.

"Farm Bureau made it clear during its testimony that dairy producers needs are as great as ever," Rotz commented. "The Milk Marketing Board deserves a thank you for recognizing the ongoing challenge our states dairy farmers face in maintaining their long-term economic viability."

Since 1988, PMMB has mandated an over-order premium be added to federal order prices for Class I (fluid) milk produced, processed and sold within Pennsylvanias borders.

Lawmakers Reverse Decision On Farmland Bill

ago," said Guy Donaldson, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) president. "If lawmakers can reverse course so quickly on a proposal that breaks longstanding public policy to protect farmland owned by the commonwealth, there's reason for concern about other commitments to farmland preservation."

Donaldson said, "It's passage will likely lead to targeting of more state-owned farmland for development. There's something very contradictory about spending millions to preserve farmland while at the same time giving up prime farmland owned and controlled by the state."

"We are extremely disappointed that the House would reconsider House Bill 66 after it was initially defeated by such a large majority (150-50)," said Brenda Shambaugh, Pennsylvania State Grange legislative director. "We are most disappointed in those representatives who changed their vote the second time around and supported the bill. This bill could have far-reaching impact on future agricultural land owned by the commonwealth."

One component of the bill is permitting the transfer of agriculture restrictions on the 22 acres to a 46-acre site in Elk Township. Concerns are that if allowed, this bill could impact agricultural land preservation programs, opening the door for agriculture restriction movements.

"The General Assembly just can't appreciate how dangerous this precedent is, and it is precedent setting," said Jayanna Yeakle of PFB. "They just look at it as one farm and one farmer that they are displacing, but it is paving the way for developers to raid a host of farms and prime farmland."

"The Grange has always been a strong supporter of the agricultural preservation program," said Grange State Master Betsy Huber. "We believe that preserved farmland should remain permanently preserved in order to maintain the integrity of the program. Transferring a covenant would set a dangerous precedent and possibly have a negative effect on future covenants."

An option available to development is a brownfield located to the west of Warren. It is a former manufacturing facility located on Rt. 6 that has been vacant since 1995.

"The Grange certainly supports economic development but feels that the available brownfield would be a much better option for all parties. Shopping centers are not easily converted back to farmland," Huber said.

State Rep. Sheila Miller (R-Berks County) expresses deep concerns on the true potential the impact House Bill 66 places not only on farmland, but all state-owned open space.

The property that was issued the deed restriction is governed by Act 442 of 1967 and Act 159 of 1982. Both acts restrict the conveyance of state owned farmland to be preserved as open space or for farmland.

Miller also notes that Act 442 governs all of state gamelands in addition to the farmland.

She said, "I contend that with passage of House Bill 66, we jeopardize more than $564 million the commonwealth has invested in protecting more than 2,000 farms by throwing doubt on the permanency of any law that is passed to protect farmland and open space when it becomes the target for other land uses."

> "The General Assembly just can't appreciate how dangerous this precedent is, and it is precedent setting. They just look at it as one farm and one farmer that they are displacing, but it is paving the way for developers to raid a host of farms and prime farm land."
> Jayanna Yeakle
> Pennsylvania Farm Bureau

House Bill 66's passage through the house and pending vote will place Gov. Rendell in conflict with the executive order signed in July 19, where he states, "It is the policy of the commonwealth to protect through the administration of all agency programs and regulations, the commonwealth's 'prime agricultural land' from irreversible conversion to uses that result in its loss as an environmental and essential food and fiber source."

While concerns among agriculture organizations are high, Sen. Noah Wenger (R-Lancaster County) does not believe this will impact our state farmland preservation programs.

"It will have an impact on that particular property," said Wenger, "I don't see it impacting the state (farmland preservation) program."

Wenger noted, "That was state-owned property, and the easement was placed on it by the legislature. The easement had not been sold — it did not go through the farmland preservation program as we know it."

Wenger said that money generated from the sale of the property in Warren County will go into the state farmland preservation program.

House Bill 66 states that any proceeds from the sale of the farmland received by the state will be credited to the Agricultural Conservation Easement Fund.

House Bill 66 was introduced at the beginning of the implementation of Warren County's comprehensive plan. The plan was developed to generate economic growth for the county.

According to House Bill 66, Warren County is facing several economic challenges, such as an unemployment rate of 19 percent, a decreasing county population, and a high percentage of land owned by state or federal government, which limits the county tax base.

Southwest Pa. Regional Dairy Day March 11

INDIANA (Indiana Co.) — The Penn State Cooperative Extension of southwest Pennsylvania is again sponsoring a southwest Regional Dairy Day, Thursday, March 11, at the Four Points Sheraton, Greensburg.

This year's featured speakers include Dr. Normand St-Pierre from The Ohio State University and Dr. Karl Nestor, dairy nutritionist for Mycogen Seeds.

St-Pierre's topic is titled "Profile of Succesful Dairy Farms" and Nestor's topic is "Evaluating Forage Quality."

The afternoon session will feature four workshops. Producers will have an opportunity to select two workshops. Topics will include continued discussion on "Profile of Successful Dairy Farms," "Evaluating Forage Quality," "Improving Cow Comfort and Movement," and "A Dairy Producer's Experience With Hispanic Labor."

Once again, the planning committee has developed an educational program that will provide practical information for the dairy producers of southwest Pennsylvania.

REAL ETATE TRANSFER CHECKLIST

Roland P. Freund
Regional Farm Management Agent
Penn State Cooperative Extension

Real estate ownership is important for every type of business, but it is most important for farmers because the land is the primary unit of agricultural production.

Farmers aspire to own land, but every farmer will expire and then own no land. So transferring real estate, planned or unplanned, is a periodically recurring event in a farm family's life.

Whether we are transferring into our ownership or out from us to others, there are some things we need to think about in the process. The list discussed here will not be complete, but it may, I hope, help you to think about some important issues as you plan for changes in real estate ownership.

How You View Real Estate

To some, land may be nothing more than a place to grow crops until it can be sold to the highest bidder. Others might view it as a heritage which has been in the family for centuries that should be passed on to the next generation of the family lineage.

Perhaps some view it as something they hold in sacred trust to cultivate as good stewards and preserve for the long-term benefit of all of humanity. Each viewpoint will have a big impact upon how individuals will acquire and dispose of their real property, and how they will care for it while it is in their possession.

Valuation

A business should place a value on every deeded property every year for the purpose of analysis. The accountant needs to be tracking "cost basis" annually. This is also called "Tax Basis" or "Basis." It is what is reported to the IRS as the cost of a capital asset plus cost of improvements minus depreciation claimed. The accountant may also periodically update the fair market valuation of the property. The dollar values so derived may not be adequate to arrive at an asking or selling price in a potential real estate transfer.

A fair market value (FMV) for a property can only be established definitively when a willing buyer with money in hand makes a genuine offer for that particular tract. Appraisers will look at "comparable sales" in the same locality, adjusting for differences between those and the subject property, to arrive at their estimate of the FMV. Lending agencies will do their own appraisal to ensure that they have sufficient collateral to protect their loan.

Buyers should be particularly cautious, because the asking price is not necessarily the FMV. Evaluate the soil classes and types, the crop production potential, and the water-holding capacity of the soils. All this information is available from the Natural Resource Conservation Service in each county.

Farm buildings and structures may be an asset, but obsolete technology and antiquated structures are more likely to be a liability and should be valued accordingly. Livestock or poultry housing should be carefully examined by an agricultural engineer or a production specialist to determine what the remaining useful life might be. Also have them prepare an estimate of repairs and upgrades necessary to operate it commercially for that remaining life.

Both buyer and seller must allocate the total sale price for a farm between business structures and improvements farm residence, and land. The tax treatment of each of these is different, so it is important that at the time of transfer a new "Tax Basis" is established for each class of property. IRS auditors will see flags if there is a significant difference between the buyer's and seller's allocations.

Liability

Farm real estate ownership can also bring liability for things that happened years ago. Explore the history of the property carefully, lest some day you find that your farm is a toxic polluter of the local aquifers, or requires costly cleanup of other waste.

Deed Restrictions

Explore early by engaging legal counsel to search the deed records in the local courthouse for any recorded deed restrictions which might have been placed upon the property. These would include the transfer or sale of the development rights to the land. These might prevent you from doing some things which you plan for the property. Also be on the lookout for any potential liability issues.

Deed Title

Before going to settlement, make sure that the property will be titled to the right person(s). It does not matter who pays for the property or how many wills you write giving that farm to your son, it will be owned by the person(s) listed on the deed and will, upon death of one party, transfer to the ownership of those other persons with rights of survivorship listed on the deed.

If parents already own a farm or two and are in partnership with a son or daughter, it makes little sense to title a new property in parents' names. The partnership operation will pay for it, but from an estate planning perspective, it might be better to title it in son's name to ensure that he will not have to share even a part of the property with siblings who contributed no effort to pay for it.

Transfer Vehicles

The deed title, as we have seen, may be a means to transfer property at death. Just make sure that you make the titles of new acquisitions (and rearrange the titles of other deeds) to fit with your overall farm transfer and estate planning goals.

Scholarship Committee Ready For Farm Show

"Our young people are really what is important to every one of us," said Tom Moyer, vice chairman of the youth scholarship committee.

Moyer, supervisor of procurement logistics for Hatfield Quality Meats in Hatfield, is impressed with the quality of applicants this year. And those applicants can someday make a difference in the ag industry.

Moyer noted that last year, the committee presented a scholarship award to each student by the nonprofit Farm Show Scholarship Foundation.

Last year, the committee awarded $2,000 scholarships to 24 Pennsylvania youth that are pursuing post-secondary education.

Since its inception in 1993, 154 individuals have received $235,500 from the foundation, money derived from membership in the foundation and public and private fund-raising efforts.

Fred Rudy, Dauphin County extension educator, noted a committee meeting was conducted Monday to finalize the preparation of the annual youth livestock sale in the Sales Arena on Tuesday, Jan. 13, at 9 a.m.

For the scholarship event, "I know what's in the bank account and it's pretty healthy," said Rudy. "Anybody can donate. We are a 5013C."

Anybody can join for $30 per year.

Gary Dean, Purina Mills development manager from Strasburg and scholarship board member, noted the committee is trying to get more donations and membership. Memberships are $30 for standard membership, $300 for Ambassador's Club, and $500 for corporations, though the foundation accepts donations in any increments for the fund.

A benefit dinner is scheduled Thursday, Jan. 29 at the downtown Hilton in Harrisburg. The scholarships will be presented there.

"The more ways we can generate interest in youth projects, the more scholarships we can provide and the higher they will be," said Dean.

A foundation breakfast will be conducted before the livestock sale. The sale and scholarship announcements are scheduled in the Sales (Small) Arena in the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg on Tuesday, Jan. 13.

According to Tom Moyer, committee chair, the committee reviews applications every year. The applications look at five different areas:

1. Academic information, including high school and college of choice.

2. 4-H and FFA involvement, in addition to community leadership.

3. Farm Show involvement, including contest participation. Interest in showing the four species, including swine, sheep, beef, and goats, is important.

4. Applicants must submit a narrative essay about their involvement in 4-H, FFA, and community work. They must describe the benefits and experience they have received from livestock projects. They must explain their contributions to the industry or society in general, and list their goals and aspirations.

5. Quality references. The applicants must have three people write reference letters. Those letters can come from ag instructors, teachers, pastors, or even siblings. "An older brother or sister can write about the candidate's involvement and what it means," according to Moyer.

The applications are reviewed early in December. This month, the committee met for two days in the boardroom at Capital Associates, Harrisburg.

Those involved include Fred Rudy, sale chairman; Paula Vitz, senior associate, Capital Associates, membership and funding chair; Mike Firestine, Fulton/Lebanon Valley Bank, treasurer; Joan Grim, Sysco Foods, chair of the special events committee; Bill Henning, Penn State, chair of the show committee; Charles Itle, Farm Show (retired), secretary; Dennis Wolff, secretary of agriculture, foundation board chair; and Moyer, vice chair, foundation board.

"Our young people give back to the community," said Moyer. "If everybody did that, things would be just fine in this world."

Those who wish to be members or donate should contact Paula Vitz, Capital Associates, at (717) 234-5350.

transferring property between unrelated parties. They usually create a tax obligation (capital gains) for the seller and a debt obligation for the buyer. Sometimes parents and child are working a farm together and providing a living for two households. If parents sell this farm to child and the operation continues unchanged, the taxes and debt payments can sink both families into a cash flow crisis.

Discounted sales are often used by parents in sales to a child. The difference between FMV and the sale price is considered by IRS to be a gift. Just make sure that your accountant has enough aspirin to sort out this basis headache!

Sale with life estate sometimes used by mother to sell to son gives her the right to live in the house for the rest of her life. The rent value of the house for the life expectancy of mother should be capitalized and the selling price reduced by that amount.

Like-kind exchange is popular in our region, as it postpones the tax obligation of selling highly appreciated real estate. The tax basis of the original property transfers to that portion of the property received in equal exchange value.

Gifts given during lifetime can transfer real property. The value of the gift above the annual exclusion ($11,000 per person) will be deducted from the Unified Credit in the estate of the donor(s). The important thing to remember is that the basis of the property transfers with the gift.

Wills transfer all those things owned by a person at death. What is probated will depend on title. Federal estate taxes appear to be a diminishing problem, but Pennsylvania's inheritance taxes are assessed on all estates. Wills provide an opportunity for families to get a stepped-up basis in property. Estate taxes are changing regularly, so wills should be reviewed and revised every three years or when there is a significant change in laws or family circumstances.

Trusts can be created to own property during life or after death. They may be useful vehicles or an unnecessary complication - depending on your circumstances. Weigh the advice of trusted CPAs and attorneys on both sides of the argument before you create these things. Remember that with a living trust your job is not completed when the documents are paid for. All property to be transferred through the trust - and that means everything you own if you are to avoid probate - must be titled to the trust. Otherwise you paid a lot of money for a sheaf of useless documents.

Intestate law is the will the state has written to transfer your property at death if you die with no will to be found. It is irresponsible of any property owner to put his/her loved ones through the unnecessary hassles of this form of estate settlement.

Conclusion

These comments from a management perspective are not intended to be legal advice, nor are they intended to provide you with all the tax implications of every real estate transfer situation. It is vital that everyone planning the transfer of any property use the services and advice of a competent accountant and an attorney qualified in real estate and also estate planning processes.

Keep the family members updated on your intentions while you explore the transfer options. Make sure that heirs are willing to shoulder the responsibilities and obligations of real estate ownership before you thrust it upon them. An important obligation of real estate ownership is to plan for its disposition in such a way that it will not create disputes or hardships among the successors.

Update On PDA's Ag Education Initiative

Dr. MeeCee Baker
Agriculture Education Coordinator

Agriculture Secretary Dennis C Wolff has made agricultural education a priority for the Department of Agriculture (PDA). Since unveiling the plan, PDA has already inspired several efforts that encompass agricultural education activities targeted to school-aged and life-long learners as well as those familiar with agriculture and the non-agriculturally literate public.

Anchoring Wolff's agricultural education initiative, the Department launched a new website, www.marketplaceforthemind.com in late October. The site serves not only teachers and students, but also all citizens of the Commonwealth. Teachers can search the website to find curriculum materials to support state academic standards, grants to fund school based projects, and traveling exhibits, which can bring technical expertise to classrooms. The site also offers listings of higher education institutions conferring agricultural degrees and scholarships to help students defray tuition costs. Consumers can also review a list of farmers markets offering fresh produce, while families can find a grower that allows "cut your own" holiday trees. Moreover, the website can help farmers identify low interest loan programs such as the Machinery and Equipment Loan Fun (MELF). I encourage you to visit the website to sample the myriad of information available.

As part of the initiative, Secretary Wolff has promised to teach lessons about agriculture on a monthly basis. His efforts in November resulted in the teaching of more than 200 students statewide. On Dec. 19, Wolff brought technical information concerning embryo transfer from his home farm in Columbia County to an advanced biology class at Indian Valley High School in Lewistown. He also met with Larry Welshans, an Indian Valley Middle School Teacher, who developed a junior high science class rooted in agricultural application. Wolff wrapped up his day in Lewistown by reading a story about milk production to elementary students at the Sacred Heart School.

MeeCee Baker

Secretary Wolff promises to continue to focus on his agricultural education initiative in 2004 by expanding the educational emphasis of the Pennsylvania Farm Show and sponsoring agricultural education workshops in the seven Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture regions during February and March. For more information about PDA's Agricultural Education Initiative, contact Dr. MeeCee Baker at c-mebaker@state.pa.us or (717) 705-9512.

Organic Producers Gather At Annual Meeting

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

MILLERSTOWN (Perry Co.) — Going organic is a good move for farmers, according to Cheryl Cook, deputy secretary with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

"Getting certified is a very smart business step," Cook told guests at the recent annual meeting of Pennsylvania Certified Organic (PCO), the state's main certifying agency.

The Dec. 10 meeting and banquet took place at Perry Valley Grange Hall, Millerstown.

Cook joined PDA this year as deputy secretary for marketing, promotions, and program services. In her previous job, she served as executive director of the Keystone Development Center, a nonprofit organization focused on building cooperatives to address challenges in rural areas of the state. She has also served as Pennsylvania director for USDA's economic and community development programs.

Organic acreage in Pennsylvania increased threefold from 1997-2001, according to Cook. Although that amount of land is still relatively small, the growth reflects the U.S. as a whole, where annual organic sales rose from $3.5 billion to $7 billion during the same period.

Cook wants to see the state's farmland preservation program revamped so that land is put to its most productive use. One of her goals is to help increase the number of working farms, in part by dividing larger plots of land not being used for intensive production and turning them into small farm operations.

Even cities have great potential for production agriculture, Cook said, giving the example of a half-acre plot in Philadelphia which produced $26,000 worth of organic crops in a year.

Cook said she will promote a "carbon credit" system in which farmers would be rewarded for practices that help reduce greenhouse gases in the atmosphere — with funds coming from the state's major polluters. According to research conducted and recently published by Rodale Institute, Kutztown, organic farming methods help reduce global warming.

A carbon credit system would provide "another source of income for what you're already doing," Cook said, noting that it would also be "another quiver in the arrow of farmland preservation."

Cook is also working on in-state marketing initiatives, including talking to public institutions about buying Pennsylvania-grown food and developing a "Pennsylvania Preferred" food-branding program.

Cook said she first learned the meaning of food security from her grandmother.

"She grew her own food," Cook said. "She had food security."

During the meeting, PCO presented awards to outstanding organic farmers. They included Tim and Anne Bock, Wills Daal Farm, Kutztown, best record-keeping; Randy and Chris Treichler of Star Hollow Farm, Three Springs, neatest farm plan and field records; and Mike and Terra Brownback of Spiral Path Farm, Loysville, for sharing knowledge and expertise.

Bob Vernon and Tom Carey received outstanding volunteer awards, along with about 35 other volunteers who were recognized for their help throughout the year.

Tim Hihn and David Griffiths were honored for completing five years as PCO directors/officers.

On hand at the meeting were PCO Executive Director Leslie Zuck and PCO inspectors to answer farmer questions about organic standards.

To a question about the required buffer width between organic fields and neighbor's conventional fields to protect against chemical drift onto organic crops, certification inspector Brian Magaro said that the right buffer width depends on the situation. For example, he noted that a thick, 10-foot-wide hedgerow is a more effective buffer than 50 feet of open field. Spray drift from neighbors also needs to be monitored to help make the decision.

"There is no set rule," Magaro said. "It's what is needed to protect the organic integrity."

A certified organic dairy farmer interested in marketing organic calves asked if he needed to update his certification to do so. Penny Sandoval, PCO certification director, said he would need to file a request to add the calves, but at no extra cost.

The group discussed a number of other topics, including compost standards, organic seed requirements, the use of chlorine as a sanitizing agent, regulations for buying used trailers to haul grain, and the availability of untreated fenceposts.

For more information about organic certification, contact PCO at (814) 364-1344.

Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Cheryl Cook, left, receives a bag full of Pennsylvania certified organic products as a gesture of appreciation from Leslie Zuck, PCO executive director.

Bronchitis, Bacteria Linked To Poultry Deaths

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Penn State researchers are studying the link between variant strains of infectious bronchitis and an increase in pullet deaths from E. coli infections on several large layer operations.

At a recent poultry management and health seminar at Kreider's Restaurant, Dr. Eva Wallner-Pendleton outlined the findings her colleague, Huaguang Lu, has made since the investigation began in September at Penn State's Animal Diagnostic Laboratory in University Park.

Included in the study are several out-of-state, multiple-age layer premises that were hit by the E. coli infection, which causes a "sharp increase in mortality" at 19-20 weeks of age — right around the time the birds start laying.

Infectious bronchitis virus (IBV) strains were isolated from most of the layer houses that submitted samples for testing. Although the flocks had been vaccinated for IBV as pullets, the vaccines were apparently no longer helpful in these cases.

In order to help isolate IBV from the layer houses, the researchers used "sentinel birds" (6-week-old pullets not vaccinated for IBV). To identify the IBV strains, Penn State used gene sequencing technology, which has recently become available for the first time in Pennsylvania. The results point to continuously changing IBV strains as the culprit on larger multiple-age farms, especially in layers, according to Wallner-Pendleton.

She said that IBV causes damage to the trachea, which allows the E. coli bacteria to invade and eventually weaken and/or kill the poultry.

Infected birds suffer from septicemia, a poisonous invasion of their system by the bacteria.

The E. coli strain discovered in the dead birds is not E. coli type 0157:H7, the strain that has caused a number of foodborne illnesses in recent years, Wallner-Pendleton said.

Eva Wallner-Pendleton describes her research on the link between E. coli infections and the occurence of infectious bronchitis strains on layer operations.

Many treatments were used to try and control the infections — with declining success, Pendleton said.

After being housed at 16 weeks of age, affected flocks experienced a growing mortality rate, often with bird losses of 1 percent or more per week for a period of several weeks.

The result is the loss of peak egg production, plus the cost of raising pullets to laying age only to have them die.

Wallner-Pendleton said that studying the problem is "time-consuming, thoroughly laborious, and expensive," but that she and her colleagues are making progress.

"This is the first time we've taken a case like this into the detail we have," she said. "We've got some work to do, but this is more than we've ever done before."

The study indicates that IBV strains are mixing and causing new strains through mutations. In order to fight the problem, poultry producers may have to update their vaccination programs more frequently, Pendleton said. The research is still in progress, and final results will not be known until updated vaccines are tried on farms.

Dr. Greg Martin, Penn State poultry agent, urged producers who notice increased mortality or any sign of disease to submit birds to one of three laboratories in the state for testing. Labs are located in Harrisburg, State College, and at New Bolton Center, Kennett Square.

"The sooner you get on it, the better," Martin said of heading off losses caused by health problems.

About 20 people attended the poultry health seminar, which is offered on a regular basis by Penn State Cooperative Extension/Department of Poultry Science.

Five Japanese guests were on hand at the seminar — Dr. Hisaya Tobioka, professor of animal science at Kyushu Tokai University; Toshiaki Sumimoto, spokesman; and M. Niidome, Natsuki Niidome, and T. Iwanaga, representing a Georgia-based company that produces electron emitters designed to reduce stress on poultry.

Funds Available To Farmers For Grazing

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — The South Central Chapter of Project Grass received a Growing Greener Grant in 2003 to assist producers in Cumberland County and surrounding counties. These funds may be used for any best management practice that implements or complements a rotation grazing system. A few of the practices that are eligible for cost share include, but are not limited to, interior and exterior fencing, watering system, crossing, alleyway stabilization, and many more.

The funding is 75 percent cost share with a 25 percent landowner match. All livestock producers are eligible to apply for this cost share program (equine, beef, exotic, sheep, etc.) regardless of operation size.

Project Grass is a cooperative effort by local farmers and county conservation districts, with assistance from the United State Department of Agriculture agencies to improve agriculture productivity throughout Pennsylvania counties.

Project Grasss Objectives are as follows:

- Enhance Pennsylvania agricultural through better utilization of grasslands.
- Improve the economic position of Pennsylvania farmers, particularly farmers working small farms.
- Increase the amount of livestock production in the Commonwealth to increase energy efficiency and develop improved marketing capabilities for hay and livestock.
- Achieve better utilization of land and water resources for improved environmental quality.

For more information on Project Grass or the various cost share programs available to assist livestock producers, please contact the Cumberland County Conservation District by telephone at (717) 240-7812.

What's For Dinner If The Checkoff Ends? Beef Council Looks At Options

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Beef Council (PBC) this week addressed the possibility of the national beef checkoff program coming to an end.

The council's annual dinner and business meeting took place at the Grantville Holiday Inn Wednesday evening. The meal featured new beef products that the checkoff program helped launch this year, including shoulder tenders and cheeseburger fries.

"We need a checkoff program," said Paul Slayton, PBC executive director. "I can't imagine this world without a checkoff."

By Jan. 27, 2004 the U.S. Supreme Court must decide whether they will hear the case for the constitutionality of the checkoff program, which was originally challenged in U.S. District Court in South Dakota in 2002, then failed to be upheld in the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals this past July.

If the Supreme Court decides to hear testimony for the national checkoff, the case would likely be brought late in 2004 and the decision made sometime in 2005, Slayton said.

Under the national beef checkoff program, producers pay $1 for each head of beef cattle they market to help fund beef promotion in the country.

"If (the Supreme Court) decides not to hear the case, we shut the door, turn out the lights, and go home," Slayton said.

Given that possibility, Slayton posed a challenge to the group to work with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture on developing a state-wide beef marketing program through the advocacy of other farm groups in the state.

"When do you want to stand up and put something in place?" Slayton said.

Members approved a motion to move forward with such a proposition. Because PBC itself could not legally spearhead the project, Slayton said the initiative would need to come from organizations such as the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association (PCA).

Terry Shearer, PCA president, said he would ask members of his organization to form a comittee to move ahead with the initiative.

Dennis Wolff, Pennsylvania agriculture secretary, spoke about the possibility of developing a Pennsylvania beef marketing act, similar to programs already in place for several other commodities in the state, including apples, milk, vegetables, and wine.

Developing this kind of in-state checkoff program "takes some time," Wolff said, noting that it would be about two years from its approval until beef promotion funds would start to flow.

Frank Stoltzfus, PCB board member and PCA representative, said that, although "the national program has benefits that we're never going to have from a state program," a Pennsylvania checkoff could also offer a unique opportunity.

"We could do a fairly reasonable job of marketing beef to a sector of the nation where the people are," Stoltzfus said.

Some PCB members expressed concern that Pennsylvania beef producers may reject a state checkoff referendum if all producers are allowed one vote, regardless of the size of their operation.

"If we had a referendum in the state, it would be a ... close vote," said Bill McCoy, ex-officio National Cattlemen's Beef Association representative.

Dr. John Comerford of Penn State noted that the original checkoff vote in 1988 passed by a large majority, and that producer size shouldn't be a concern.

Slayton listed promotion activities funded by national checkoff. Beef demand in the U.S. has increased by 10 percent in the past five years, reversing a 20-year downward trend.

According to Slayton, that's hard proof that the checkoff program and its "Beef: It's What's for Dinner" campaign works. He said beef promotion through the checkoff brings producers about $200 more per head.

The checkoff has a lot to do with the record high cattle prices producers have enjoyed this fall, according to Slayton.

"It irks me when people say it was because they shut down the (Canadian) border," he said. "Yes, that's eight percent less beef, but there are a lot of other things going on."

This year, PBC pushed for the initiation of "May Beef Month," which was announced by Gov. Ed Rendell and featured PBC serving grilled hamburgers at the "Great Pennsylvania Workout Day" at the Capitol.

Other PBC work in the state this year included a campaign to promote Pennsylvania's Beef Quality Assurance (BQA) program, with a focus on certifying dairy producers. This promotion kicked off in timely fashion on May 19 — one day before the BSE (bovine spongiform encephalopathy) case was announced in Canada.

Paul Slayton

"Issues management" is probably the most important function of the national checkoff program, according to Slayton.

After BSE hit the news, beef promoters quickly spread word that the U.S. beef supply was safe.

"Consumer confidence really didn't waver," Slayton said.

Wolff Appoints New Director

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On Thursday, Secretary of Agriculture Dennis C. Wolff announced that Earl M. Haas has been named director of the Bureau of Plant Industry.

"The Bureau of Plant Industry plays a critical role in protecting agriculture in Pennsylvania and the United States," said Wolff. "I am pleased that Earl has accepted this post as he has the knowledge and experience necessary to deal with the many plant and crop-related challenges we encounter in agriculture."

Haas joined the department in 1982 as an agricultural products inspector in the southeast region. In his new role, Haas will be responsible for consumer protection in areas ranging from animal feed and greenhouse products to pesticides. Overseeing 85 full-time employees and up to 90 temporary employees, Haas will also direct programs in areas of farm safety, sustainable agriculture, and plant certification.

November Fluid Milk Price Announced

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) recently announced the prices to be paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers for November Class I milk (beverage) as an average of $18.42 in the western areas of the state and an average of $18.91 in central and eastern areas. These prices include the over-order premium of $1.65 per one hundred pounds of milk.

Farmers, whose milk production is pooled under a federal order, will receive a market-wide blend price based upon the value of all classes of milk. However, the blend price received will vary as the component composition of a farmer's milk differs from the established benchmarks of 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids.

Over-Order Premium $1.65

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board Chairman Boyd E. Wolff recently announced that board members have voted unanimously to continue the current level of the over-order premium. The over-order premium is paid on Class I (bottled) milk produced, processed, and sold within the state. The over-order premium of $1.65 was due to expire Dec. 31. As a result of this vote, the $1.65 over-order premium will be maintained at $1.65 Jan. 1 through June 30.

This action is the result of a hearing conducted Dec. 3 in response to a petition submitted by the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

Stakeholders Report Progress, Honor Pacesetters

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

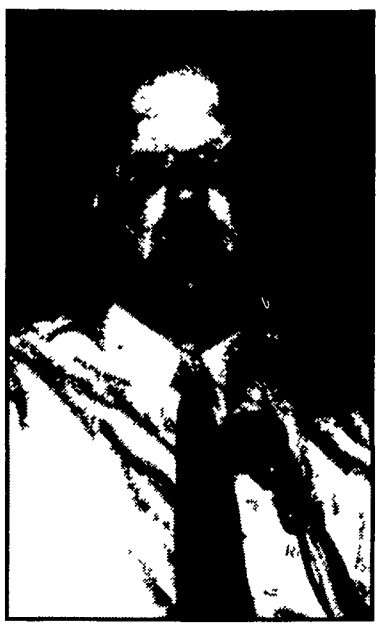
GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders honored industry pacesetters, reviewed 2003 accomplishments, and outlined goals for 2004 at their breakfast meeting Dec. 11, during the annual two-day conference in Grantville.

President Gary Heckman said the organization grew its membership this year and initiated some new programs. These include a new Dairy Advocacy and Resource Team (DART), a Website (www.padairystake.org), and a milk production record book designed to help producers increase daily production per cow.

Heckman said the aim of the advocacy and resource program is to make 1,000 DART representatives available for the 9,000 dairy farms across the Pennsylvania.

Stakeholders also placed three members on the new Dairy Task Force created by Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Dennis Wolff.

More than 90 applications for the Business Planning Assistance Program (BPAP) came in this year. Begun in 1999, BPAP has paid a total of $62,165 in grants to 47 producers through this past November for strategic business planning.



Rod Hissong of Mercer Vu Farms, Pacesetter Award winner, says that business planning assistance has played a big role in the success of his family's dairy operation.

Russ Redding, Pennsylvania deputy secretary of agriculture, spoke to the group about growing options for risk management in the state. About 16,000 Pennsylvania farmers have taken out crop insurance, including what he called a "whole farm program." The policies have resulted in "significant renumeration" to farmers, according to Redding.

"Education is changing producers' behavior," he said.

Redding pointed out the need for Pennsylvania to team with other states in order to leverage U.S. Congress to allow greater risk management tools for agriculture in the future.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders presented two outstanding dairy operations in Pennsylvania with the 2003 Pacesetter Award.

Award recipient Clifford Hawbaker is credited with being the creative engine in the formation of the Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania (PDMP) in 1994.

"I'm a dreamer," Hawbaker said. "My wife Maggie asks me if I've ever been in a box."

Hawbaker's drive to succeed — and to help his contemporaries in the dairy industry do the same — prompted him to lay the groundwork for PDMP. The organization provides a unique opportunity for progressive producers to interact in an educational and informational way with other producers and agribusiness persons.

"I'm excited about the future of what can happen here in Pennsylvania," Hawbaker said in accepting the award. He pointed out that 50 percent of the U.S. population is within a one-day drive of the state.

"Half the people in the country are at our fingertips," he said. "The Pennsylvania dairy industry is alive.

Hawbaker and his wife Maggie operate a progressive 410-cow dairy near Chambersburg. Hawbaker's emphasis is not on production awards or top genetics alone, but on profitability and environmental stewardship. His self-designed and somewhat unique manure system is revolutionary in its design and is the foundation for his effective nutrient management model. The farm consists of 300 acres of grassland. Hawbaker contracts other forages from local farmers.

In addition to PDMP, Hawbaker's activities have included the Franklin County Farm Bureau (past president), Franklin County Farmland Preservation, Franklin County Soil Conservation, Mount Joy Farmers Cooperative, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders. This year, he joins the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders board of directors.

The Hissongs of Mercer Vu Farms were first presented with the Pacesetter Award in August at the PDMP summer educational meeting at their farm. Their mission is "to produce high quality milk efficiently, safely and profitably as to benefit management, employees, cows, the environment and the community in which we live."

Clifford Hawbaker accepts the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholder Pacesetter Award for his vision that helped form the Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania.

Ron, Rick, and Rod Hissong are all active in the dairy industry and in their community.

The farm's Website, www.mercervufarms.com, has evolved into a vehicle to keep the public informed and updated on modern agricultural practices. The site even contains information about the positive economic impact the operation has, and will have the in the future, on the community.

Holstein USA Approves ID Program

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Holstein Association USA, Inc. recently approved the Cattle Identification Database (CID) to identify any breed of cattle, including crossbred animals.

CID will be available for producers late in 2004.

The CID program, under development by Insinc USA, Inc., a subsidiary of Holstein Association USA, Inc., will record lineage and available performance data on crossbred animals. The program offers the convenience of recording every animal in a herd, regardless of breed, and gives producers the ability to meet their identification needs.

"Holstein Association USA would like to obtain information on crossbred animals because most crosses today contain Holstein genetics," said Tom Lawlor, Ph. D., director of research and development, Holstein Association USA, Inc. "We are interested in measuring how other breeds benefit from the Holstein cross because of genetic improvements such as increased production and decreased inbreeding."

The Holstein Association USA, Inc. board of directors approved CID at their November board meeting.

RENTING HEIFER FACILITIES

Roland P. Freund
Regional Farm Management Agent
Carlisle

Roland P. Freund

Renting livestock facilities is necessary for young families getting started in the business. They have debt to pay on their cattle and equipment, and adding more debt to own buildings would make the banker very nervous. So they look for shelter that can be rented to house their animals.

It would be nice to say that the space to house a heifer is worth so many dollars per year. The problem is that the dairy farmer would like to find a modern facility and all he can find is an old bank barn. Both will house cattle, but how can we evaluate the facility to come up with a comparable cost of use?

It is not just a matter of space. Even ignoring ventilation and animal comfort issues (which we should never do!), the cost of housing includes bedding and labor and manure handling costs — which all vary greatly between housing systems.

Some years ago I prepared a study looking at the cost of rearing heifers. Three levels of housing investment were considered:

- High investment, a slatted floor and freestall.
- Medium investment, a "Virginia counterslope."
- Zero investment, a bank barn or chicken coop.

Let's look at the annual costs per bred heifer housed as used in that study. (See chart.)

Examining these numbers more closely we might suggest that the maximum a renter should pay to rent a Medium facility would be $170 per heifer per year. She could "own" her own structure for that annual cost. Because of location and convenience considerations, the renter might want to get the use of this facility for $100 or less a head. Regardless of rent paid, bedding and labor will add another $50 to annual costs.

Now this Low investment bank barn is another matter. The owner should be thrilled to get $20 a heifer per year for it because then all his costs are covered. In reality it might not be worth even that. Theoretically, if (and it is a BIG if) the bank barn raises heifers as well as the medium facility, the renter should pay a maximum of $50 less that he can rent a medium facility for. This is because bedding and labor will cost $50 more for the bank barn than for the medium facility. That means that if the renter could rent a counterslope facility for $100 then an equal quality bank barn would be worth $50. Unfortunately most of us can not point to a single old bank barn which raises heifers as healthily as a counterslope.

These figures are used to illustrate a process that needs to be followed in coming up with comparable rental rates. Use your own numbers to evaluate each unique situation which you encounter. Make sure that you factor in the cost of correcting any ventilation and other inadequacies.

In this century when nobody leases a Ford Model T buckboard to provide for his transport needs, we have to ask why people are still willing to spend good money for the equivalent technology in animal housing. Perhaps the answer is that bank barns are the only alternative available. But we need to be creative and make sure that, whatever housing system we consider, it provides adequate ventilation, some protection from severe weather, convenient access to feed and water, and a reasonable manure disposal system.

	High	Medium	Low
Investment/heifer	$1,200	$875	$0
Loan, repairs, tax	$205	$170	$20
Bedding	$10	$13	$20
Labor	$18	$37	$80
Annual cost	$233	$220	$120

LanChester Pork Council Talks SWAP

CHARLENE M. SHUPP ESPENSHADE
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — An estimated 50 swine producers gathered at Yoder's Restaurant Tuesday to discuss current production issues and elect their board of directors.

Issues included animal health, animal welfare programs, and the pork quality assurance program.

A highlight of the discussion was the new Swine Welfare Assurance Program (SWAP) by Erik Risa of the National Pork Council. The SWAP program was launched in August 2003.

This program is a voluntary producer program that offers an objective, scientifically based welfare assessment of pigs.

"SWAP is an objective assessment of welfare," said Risa, "(and) is independent of housing or size."

SWAP was developed to assist producers in measuring animal welfare on the farm. Risa stresses that when an operation enters into the program, SWAP "does not certify a person, it certifies the site."

The SWAP program is hopeful to provide an answer to the recent concerns of the retail food industry for a guarantee that suppliers are using animal welfare practices. The nine principles to be evaluated focus on the area of records, animal observations, and facilities.

The SWAP program consists of having a certified SWAP educator visit the farm to review the operation. After the initial evaluation, a farm is provided benchmarks on how the operation is doing. Benchmarking provides the producer a way to handle the farm's welfare assessments.

However, Risa stresses that SWAP was not developed in reaction to the retail industry. The program was started in 2000 as a proactive action by pork producers.

To summarize the hopes of the program, Risa said, "In the end, its the right thing to do. It demonstrates our commitment to welfare."

Nichole Boettger of National Pork Council also addressed what is happing at the national office. In regards to how they are handling the "constitutionality" question of promotion checkoff programs, it is "business as usual" until a ruling is made.

Also, Boettger noted the start of an eight-course distance learning program. The course examines different production issues, providing the "science behind the tactics instead of the how-to," she said. The courses are available on an interactive CD and allow producers to utilize them when it fits their schedule.

Dale Spiess of Boehringer Ingelheim and Charlie Francisco of Intervet spoke about animal health products and practices that could be utilized on the farm to improve productivity.

At the annual meeting, three directors were re-elected to another term. They were Scott Bailey, Ephrata; Nelson Beam, Elverson; and Kurt Good, Denver.

NASS
Agriculture Counts

By Marc Tosiano
Pa. State Statistician

Editor's note: This is a monthly column from the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service (PASS), a field office of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA). The Website is www.usda.gov/nass/.

FLORICULTURE, NURSERY AND CHRISTMAS TREE PRODUCTION

The greenhouse and nursery industry is consistently among the top five sectors of Pennsylvania agriculture. Within crops, the value of horticulture sales is a very close second to mushroom sales.

In 2002, Agaricus mushroom sales totaled about $391 million, which was 9.7 percent of all Pennsylvania agricultural sales. Greenhouse and nursery sales were about $360 million, or 8.9 percent of all sales. The next largest crop was corn, with $128 million of sales or 3.2 percent of the total.

To measure the floriculture portion of this industry, the annual Commercial Floriculture Survey was recently mailed to about 1,200 producers in Pennsylvania as part of a 36-state survey across the nation.

In order to measure the other part of the horticulture industry, the Nursery and Christmas Tree Production Survey is done every two or three years. It was mailed to about 1,000 Pennsylvania growers as part of a 17-state program. This survey was first completed for 2000 production.

The results of these surveys include information about production, sales, and average prices received for various plant materials. Some growers have used these reports to evaluate their own prices against the state average and prices in surrounding states.

The floriculture report includes information about annual bedding plants, herbaceous perennials, flowering potted plants, cut flowers, cut (florist) greens, foliage plants, and propagative material. The nursery and Christmas tree survey includes data on broadleaf and coniferous evergreens, deciduous shade and flowering trees, deciduous shrubs, fruit and nut plants, cut Christmas Trees, transplants for commercial truck crop production, and propagation material or lining out stock.

The Floriculture Crops Summary will be issued on April 27 and the "Nursery and Christmas Tree Summary" on July 26 (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm).

Nursery And Floriculture Chemical Usage

Without actual application rates from growers, the EPA may assume growers use far more pesticides than they actually do. This could hurt the horticultural industry if pesticides are unnecessarily removed from the market.

A recent example is when US-Apple used this and other information to preserve the use of azinphos-methyl (Guthion) to control insects and mites. Similarly, the National Potato Council was also able to preserve the use of methamidophos (Monitor) to control virus-carrying aphids and triphenyltin hydorzide (TPTH, Supertin) for late blight.

About 700 growers in Pennsylvania, along with 3,500 growers in five other states, will get a letter in the mail that explains the survey. The survey is conducted every two or three years. Trained interviewers will then contact the selected operators to set up a meeting time that is convenient for the grower.

The interview typically lasts about an hour, but it can help to preserve chemicals you rely on. Having fertilizer and pesticide records on hand will help to simplify the interview. In Pennsylvania, growers will be able to earn one core pesticide credit for responding to the survey. The results of this study will be released Sept. 15, 2004 (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm).

Free Catalog

The "NASS 2004 Guide to Products And Services" is available by calling (800) 727-9540. This 30-page booklet describes the national program of agricultural statistics provided by USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS).

All national reports are listed with instructions for how to access the reports at no charge via e-mail subscriptions and the Internet. National reports on paper can also be ordered for a fee. However, paper reports from Harrisburg are still free to growers. Call (800) 498-1518 for an order form.

Year-End Surveys Continue

Last month I discussed the year-end surveys done in December for crops, hogs, and poultry. In January, we ask growers for your help to measure production of other commodities for 2003. Once again, the surveys mentioned below are conducted in all major states to generate national and state production statistics for 2003. To see the results of all these surveys, see our Website at www.usda.gov/nass/.

I hope you can find the time to help us make the most accurate "Agriculture Counts" by returning your survey form as soon as possible or answering our questions over the telephone.

Jan. 1 Cattle And Sheep Surveys

These two surveys provide the only state-level measure of cattle and sheep herds. In July, only the largest operations are contacted for input to national-level data.

The cattle survey generates inventories for beef cows, milk cows, bulls, heifers, steers, and calves. The survey also asks and publishes data about death loss, calves born, cattle on feed, and value of breeding stock.

The sheep survey targets inventories and values of ewes, rams, lambs for breeding, and market lambs by weight group. Other data requested includes lambs born, death losses, wool production, and wool prices received by farmers.

A letter was sent to about 1,600 cattle and 300 sheep growers that were selected and we will ask for your help during early January. Both the "Cattle" and "Sheep and Goats" reports will be issued Jan. 30 (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm).

Honey Production

This annual program generates state and national statistics about number of colonies, honey production, stocks on hand, and average prices.

In Pennsylvania, about 200 apiarists have already been sent the annual survey. Telephone calls will be made to nonrespondents in late January. The "Honey" report will be published Feb. 27 (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm).

Commissioners Present Agricultural Awards

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — The Chester County Commisioners and the Chester County Agricultural Development Council presented two agricultural citations at the Dec. 9 commissioners meeting. These awards are given annually for excellence in agriculture.

The Angelo J. Zunino and Son, Inc. mushroom operation was honored with the Farmer of the Year Award for 2003. Angelo J. Zunino and Son, Inc. is a modern mushroom enterprise in New Garden Township operated by David Zunino with the help of his family, including five sons.

David Zunino has implemented best management practices at their facilities and the operation has been an outstanding cooperator with the Chester County Conservation District and Natural Resources Conservation Service. They use the net system technology for efficiency in their operation, and use runoff and wastewater in ways that prevent pollution. Their mushroom business is a tradition that spans four generations of the family.

The 2003 Distinguished Agricultural Service Award was presented to Charles (Chip) Roten, a vice president with The Peoples Bank of Oxford. He has devoted much of his professional career to providing various types of loans for the agricultural community. He has established the Peoples Bank of Oxford as the leading bank in Pennsylvania utilizing the Next Generation Loan Program. Roten has worked with county and state officials to improve and streamline the program. He has shared his knowledge of agricultural lending with other lenders and is highly regarded in the agricultural community.

The 'Christmas Experience'

through retail outlets such as supermarkets and for church and civic group fundraisers.

Barziloski noted that the majority of their sales are in the wholesale portion of their business, about 80 percent. However, it is watching families come to the farm to select their trees that the family truly enjoys.

"What is the perfect Christmas tree? Well, the perfect tree is what people like," said Barziloski. "It might not be what a professional grower sees. When a family comes to the farm to choose and cut a tree, it's really a treat because they will cut trees that they pick. To them, that's their tree. The kids will pick it out, and it my be less than standard (in a grower's eyes.) But, to them, it's their tree."

Bennie's Nurseries was began in 1932 by Veto's father Ben Barziloski. Veto entered into the business with his brother Bob in the 1970s after completing a tour with the U.S. Marine Corps.

Veto remained in partnership with his brother until Bob's death in 1996.

Today, the family raises an estimated 75 acres of Christmas trees, with the majority of the remaining lands in forests.

Varieties raised are Douglas fir, white pine, Fraser fir, Scotch pine, blue spruce, Norway spruce, and white spruce. During the summer, the Barziloskis have a successful landscaping business.

Although Veto never went to college, he has kept up with information through other educational oppertunities.

"I've been in the buisness all of my life," said Veto. "I have gone to a lot of seminars, educational updates, and meetings to keep up on things."

Veto credits Penn State extention, the Pennsylvania Department of Agricutlure (PDA), and agricultural research for keeping him up to date with the latest findings in Christams tree production.

With an investment of 10 to 15 years into raising a tree from seed to maturity, the newest scientific information helps the Barziloskis with selection of seeds through seed sourcing and other tree handling techniques.

Veto notes that seed sourcing has helped him in the selection of what trees will produce well in this climate, helping with the seed-to-harvest results.

Although seed sourcing can improve tree development and increase harvest rates, not all trees grown are able to be sold. Some of the trees will not meet the farm's quality standards. The Barziloskis make use of low-quality trees in wreaths and garland.

"That's a good way to get rid of some of the trees that don't develop," said Veto. "You never get a 100 percent harvest for various reasons. Making garland and wreaths is a good way to use those unusable trees."

Besides the decision-making process for selecting the tree genetics for growing trees another critical decision-making area is pricing.

"It's a-one-time-a-year harvest operation and a one-time shot," said Veto. "If you don't sell your trees, you have blown your chance."

Christmas tree pricing is market driven, and Veto stresses a grower has to be "careful to avoid overpricing." He has seen many highs and lows in the Christmas tree market.

Although there is no official price formulation, the Barziloskis base their pricing off three factors— supply, demand, and quality of the trees.

While the Christmas season demands long hours and challenging days for the family, their Christmas tree growing experience has taken them to some amazing places. Their trees, wreaths, and garland are used in the homes of many famous people.

One yearly tradition is decorating Joan River's New York City apartment and the home of a magazine publisher. And through a tree stand they supply to in New York City, customers who have purchased their trees include Bruce Willis, Macaulay Culkin, Telly Savalas, and several rock stars.

Veto notes it is neat to watch celebrities come and select their trees. They often pull up to the stands in limousines and with their children will continue the family's tradition of picking a Christmas tree.

For the Barziloski children, growing up on a tree farm is a great experience. They are happy for the opportunities that have come their way.

"It's not bad," said Adam, 19. "You did not have to go out and find a job, there was always one here. It's something fun to do."

Adam, a 2003 Tunkhannock Area High School graduate, hopes to take over the family business. He is not in college at this time, but Adam does not rule out going in the future.

Michael, a 17-year-old student at Tunkhannock Area High School, loves being on the farm. "It is work, but (more importantly), it's something you have for the rest of your life."

The eldest son, Veto, is studying business at Temple University.

As the tree-buying season begins to wind down and life slowly returns to a slower pace, there is no doubt of the love the Barziloski's have for their way of life and business.

"I do enjoy working in the fields," said Veto. "The trees, the fresh air. It's a great place to be, where we live— the most beautiful place on earth."

Manure Haulers Debate Start Of Association

CHARLENE M. SHUPP ESPENSHADE
Lancaster Farming Staff

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — About 20 certified manure haulers gathered at the Dauphin County Ag Center Tuesday to debate the start of a manure hauler association.

With the changes on the horizon for the Nutrient Management Act and other legislation, concerns were debated on what haulers needed to do and what would be the purpose of a "custom applicator association."

Robb Meinen of Penn State mediated the discussion as the group began to formulate a plan of action.

Areas of concerns and needs listed by the group was legislative representation, information dissemination, networking, and public relations.

Problems with transportation department regulations expounded the challenges of defining the manure hauling industry and what type of industry it is.

While group reservations to deal with transportation issues were high, it exemplified how groups outside of the custom applicator industry continue to struggle on defining what it is.

Meinen noted that this industry has grown dramatically in the past 20 years to meet the needs of farm operations. "How many manure haulers did you know in 1980? This is a new industry. They (PennDot) don't know how to handle it."

Walt Peechatka of PennAg Industries Association assisted in the facilitation and discussion, sharing insight on how PennAg operates and challenged the group to define what their needs were.

The final decision and course of action of the haulers was to pursue an idea to form a "Custom Applicator Council" under the umbrella of PennAg. This idea has a long way to go to reality, with the first hurdle being approval from the PennAg board of directors.

The next PennAg director meeting will be Jan. 7, where Peechatka will present the proposal. The next step the group takes will be based on the board decision.

If PennAg approves the idea, in order to organize a "custom applicator council" under PennAg, a minimum of 20 businesses will have to join the organization.

A follow-up manure hauler meeting is planned for Feb. 5 for a final desicion and to organize the haulers association.

Haulers in attendance were positive about what they accomplished.

"I did not know what to expect coming into it. I had some apprehension," said Steve Lehman of Hopewood. "I think is was productive. I'm satisfied with the outcome."

"I don't know how much we'll be able to accomplish, but we've tried," said Woody Martin of Shippensburg. "There are some issues with the nutrient management plans, I think it (an association) will help us make sure we get the right laws in the right place."

Meinen summarized the evening as, "We had a group come together with no organization, but a common interest. We were able to move and pick a direction. Hopefully (an association) will move the industry in a positive direction."

Holiday Heritage

Start a New Dessert Tradition

Just thinking about the holidays reminds us that there's so much to do in so little time. But here's a way to enjoy this hectic season. Decide which activities are really important, then make the ones you choose even more special. When you include a sweet treat as part of any holiday activity, you make it a seasonal pleasure.

Nibble a piece of creamy homemade fudge studded with candied cherries, arranged in your favorite holiday dish, as you deck your house with fresh greenery. Offer luscious pecan-topped caramel cake while your family trims the tree. Or serve comforting bread pudding drizzled with warm cinnamon cream sauce when you exchange gifts or welcome guests to a New Year's open house.

Get Creative With Cranberries

Ruby red cranberries lend a festive touch to salads, entrees, breads, sauces, and desserts. They also add a festive air to holiday crafts and decor.

Need a quick centerpiece? Open a bag of fresh cranberries, add them to a vase and fill with water, insert a bouquet of fresh flowers.

Make a cranberry float by floating cranberries around a floating candle in a water-filled glass dish.

How about a cranberry garland? Traditionally strung with popcorn, cranberries also make a colorful garland on their own. Hang from mantels or wind through a chandelier. To make stringing cranberries easier, wax the needle and thread with bee's wax or use dental floss.

To keep the garland fresher longer, spray shellac on the cranberries after stringing them. To avoid staining, do not place on lightly painted surfaces or lines.

Pointsettia Care, Tips

HUNTERDON, N.J. — Pointsettias are no longer just red or white. Pink, coral, purple, red with pink flecks, pink with red flecks, pink-red-white marble are just some of the color variations that have been developed. Some have yellow or white variegated foliage and others ruffled or incurved bracts of the.

Poinsettias are not poisonous if eaten, a conclusion based on many studies; however, some individuals may be sensitive to contact with the latex sap.

A poinsettia "blossom" is actually composed of bracts, the large colorful "petals" that are actually modified leaves, and the true flowers that are held in cyathia, the small green structures that comprise the center of the poinsettia "blossom." A close look at the cyathia may be one clue to choosing a poinsettia that is closer to the beginning of "bloom" than the end.

If the true flowers bearing yellow pollen are prominently visible in most cyathia or if the cyathia have dropped, the "bloom" may be passing or past peak.Poinsettias do not like cold (below 50 F), not even a short exposure during transport from shop to home. The seller should provide some protection a sleeve-for the plant, and it should not be transported or left in a cold automobile trunk. Cold can cause leaf and bract drop and bract discoloration so avoid cold temperatures, even drafts once the plant is at home. Remove the plant from the sleeve or other protection sooner rather than later. Poinsettias enclosed too long develop epinasty, the drooping of leaves and bracts, which will usually disappear in a few days under good growing conditions. Don't buy poinsettias that are stored or displayed in sleeves.

Poinsettias need regular watering (drying out will cause premature leaf loss) but the potting mix should dry to the touch before re-watering. Give them a bright location but no direct sun while they are in bloom to avoid excessive drying or high temperatures. Ideal temperatures are 70-75 degrees during the day and 60-65 degrees at night. The plants might benefit from fertilizer after a month or so, especially if the plan is to keep them beyond the holidays as houseplants.

For more information on poinsettias, visit the Poinsettia Pages of the University of Illinois Extension website at www.urbanext.uiuc.edu/poinsettia.

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Seasons Greetings!

Well, it's that time of year again when we try a little harder to remember good friends and those folks we care about but rarely see, with holiday wishes.

We tried to get our farmers here to put some "howdy's" together, but they don't seem to find time to do that. So, as usual, it falls back on us girls, here at the barn, to cover their tracks. Our tracks are much prettier than theirs, anyway, with our graceful curved hoofprints, compared to their scruffy, tire-tread, boot prints.

Besides, this gives us a chance to set straight a Christmas myth that has proliferated forever.

It's that reindeer tale.

You know the story. Every Christmas Eve, Santa packs his sleigh up chocked full of toys for all the good girls and boys of the world. Then he hitches eight reindeer, plus another one up front with a red headlight, and off they fly.

Not so. Well, the Santa part is okay. But that nine-headed hitch up front?

Those are cows, my friends. Cows.

Actually, they're heifers, the more lightweight, fleet-footed teenagers of the bovine world. Cows like us can't go, because, once we have a calf, we have to be milked at least twice a day. And, goodness knows Santa has a full enough schedule delivering those packages around the world, without stopping to milk the team.

Several of us here at the farm always spent our summers practicing to audition for Santa's hitch this week. It's work, let me tell you. Work. None of that reindeer games stuff. You have to stay focused.

Take flying practice.

Heifers just can't snap our hooves and bounce off. Launching takes specific technique. With a little style. And grace. Eight — no, make that nine — clumsy, unpracticed heifers tripping on the roof would make an awful racket. They can't fly around waking up all those sleeping children. Most of the little folks will be out of bed long before their parents are ready, as it is.

No, Santa operates with stealth. So we always practiced making graceful takeoffs by jumping the dry bridge that's supposed to keep us in the pasture. Our farmer, now, he always figures the heifers are slipping across it to snitch green corn or steal fresh alfalfa. If only he knew it was Santa's sleigh-hitch practice, he'd probably be proud, instead of grumbling about it.

After perfecting clearing the ground-level dry bridge, we'd gradually add a little height to our take-off technique. Pastures fence jumping is perfect for that. Once in a while, though, one of us would knock out a post.

Though we on the milking string are too mature for flights around the world, we do have inside gossip on the heifer team that's expected to pull Santa's sleigh later this week. It includes Ashley and Dancer and Francis and Pixie, Connie, Lupine, Donna, and Yipsy.

Oh, and Sparkle got picked to be the headlight in the front. She always has to be poking her head under the strand of electric around the grazing area, so she gets her nose lit pretty regularly.

Now, we all hope that you and your herd of loved ones have a peaceful and happy Christmas season. And, don't forget that the original Christmas celebration took place in a barn.

By the way, when you leave milk and cookies out for Santa, we'd appreciate a snack of hay and a bite or two of cow chow. We'll try not to leave anything behind for you but happy memories.

Merry Christmas!

Cloister Lantern Tours Tell Test Of Faith

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Early American winters could be challenging, but the winter of 1765 was especially difficult at the Ephrata Cloister. A year earlier, active and former members of the German religious community began a legal battle over the ownership of the land occupied by the society since 1732. The complex struggle involved illegitimate land deeds, secret alliances, and uncharitable acts. Now, with the benefit of historical research, this dramatic episode in the Cloister's history will be brought to life at the annual Christmas Lantern Tours on Dec. 26-29. The tours which begin every half-hour between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. require advance reservations which can be made by calling the Ephrata Cloister at (717) 733-6600.

"Like any community, the Cloister had its share of challenges and struggles. It's how those challenges are met and the struggles overcome that make the stories of history," says museum educator Michael Showalter.

This year's Lantern Tours are no exception. Each year a new story is featured in these popular tours. Visitors will be introduced to characters from Ephrata's past including Conrad Beissel, the community's founder, and Samuel Eckerlin, a former member who returned to claim the land.

These special role-playing tours are presented by the student historians of the Ephrata Cloister, area students in grades 7 and above who volunteer their time at the historic site. "The story is a bit complex, but the end result is a fascinating tale that shows how people of opposing views occupied the same land — a challenge that remains even in the modern world," says Showalter.

Ephrata Cloister, founded in 1732, was a protestant monastic community of celibate Brothers and Sisters supported by a married congregation who lived near the settlement. Members, mostly German immigrants, sought spiritual goals rather than earthly rewards and chose Saturday as their main day of worship. At its zenith in the 1740s and 1750s, the congregation numbered nearly 300 people. Housed in impressive Germanic-style buildings, the lifestyle of the celibate members was characterized by strict discipline and self-denial. They became known for their self-composed music, Germanic calligraphy called Frakturschriften, and printing. Following the death of the last celibate member in 1813, the remaining married congregation formed the German Seventh-Day Baptist Church. Members continued to live and worship at the Cloister until 1934.

In 1941 the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania acquired the surviving elements of the historic site and began a program of restoration and interpretation. Today, nine original buildings are part of a 28-acre complex open for visitors.

The Ephrata Cloister is located in the Borough of Ephrata at 632 West Main Street (Route 322) at the intersection with Route 272. Admission is $7 for adults, $6.50 for senior citizens, and $5 for youth ages 6-17. For more information, call (717) 733-6600.

Cooperation Builds Successful Grove Family Farm

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

SHIPPENSBURG (Franklin Co.) — News keeps happening at Gro-Lan Farms, where Jeff and Linda Grove are raising their four children.

The 300-acre farm with 160 milking Holsteins recently was in the news when the Groves received the first agricultural loan for expansion offered through the Small Business First (SBF) Program.

While the family farm operation expands, the children of Jeff and Linda Grove are growing up and enlarging their own spheres of influence.

Emily, who celebrated her 20th birthday Wednesday, is the Pennsylvania Alternate dairy princess. Laura, 18, is a state FFA officer. Caleb, 12, and Renee, 10, are assuming more farm chores to enable their older sisters to crisscross the state, fulfilling demanding schedules.

Those responsibilities are only the beginning of a very involved family in community and ag-related affairs.

"Not everything is perfect here, but we live here and make it work," Jeff said. "We laugh a lot, and mealtime gets quite loud at our table."

Jeff's wife Linda works for the local Agway while he farms in partnership with his brother Jay.

"We're a four cell-phone family," Grove said of synchronizing family togetherness, while each pursues individual interests.

Morning milking starts at 3 a.m.

"Everyone pitches in. It takes cooperation to see the work gets done." Emily said of taking her turn milking, feeding, and bedding the cows and scraping the barn despite a busy off-farm schedule.

"We wouldn't be able to do all we do if our parents didn't respect our desires to become involved (in off-farm activities)," Emily said.

Her dad said, "Our children have never given us any reason not to trust them. I don't need to call them twice to get up to milk. They are always in the barn on time and willing to take responsibility. They work together and fill in for each other."

Linda said with three daughters she had expected to be assured of having plenty of household help. "But by age 2, they're out with their dad working in the barn."

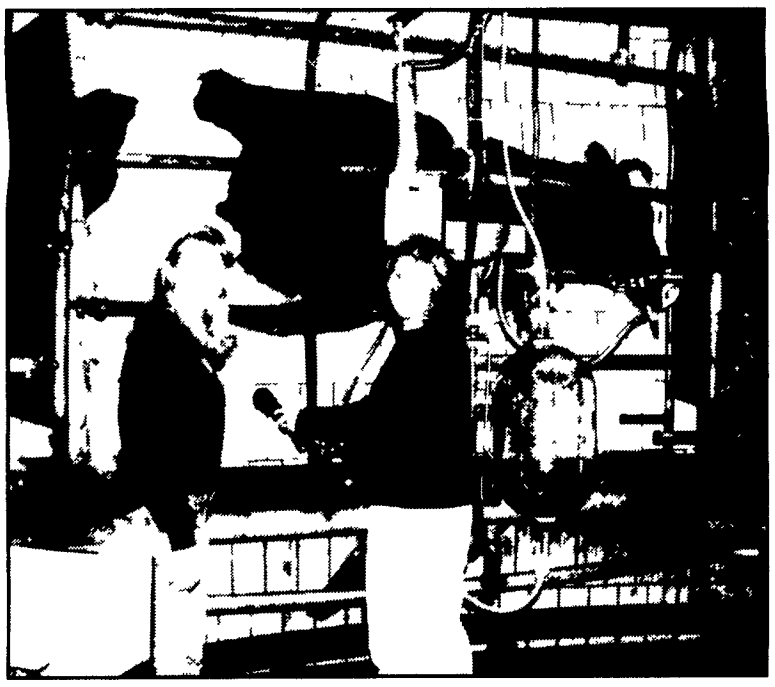
That doesn't mean the girls don't do kitchen duty. Linda said, "We all help whomever needs help."

"We cook," Emily said of her and Laura's chores, "but it's not our favorite thing. We'd rather be in the barn."

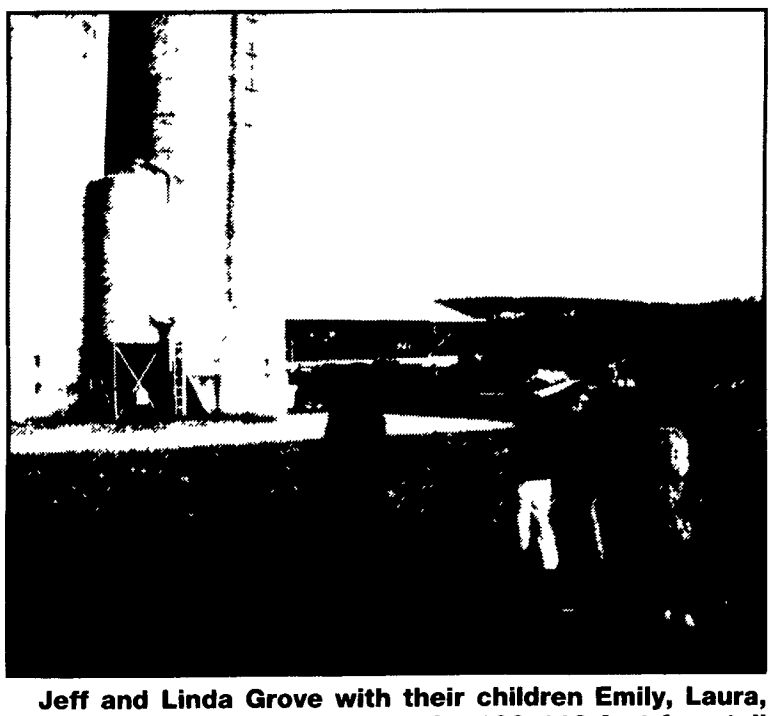
Laura said that growing up with assigned duties on the farm taught her hard work, responsibility, and time management, a state sentinel needs.

"In a way, growing up on a farm involves us somewhat in the workplace before we even leave the farm," Emily said.

Gro-Lan Farm has been in the Grove family since 1918. It is home for Jeff and Linda Grove and their children Emily, 20, right, Laura, 18, left, Caleb, 12, and Renee, 10.



Jeff said of his daughters Emily, left, and Laura, "They are always responsible and eager to help on the farm. I never need to call them twice for the 3 a.m. milking."



Jeff and Linda Grove with their children Emily, Laura, Caleb, and Renee walk toward the 186x113-foot freestall barn that is under construction. The Grove family was in the news recently for being the first farm to receive a low-interest loan through the Small Business First Program.

Emily said that comparing her life with her peers isn't an option. "Each person has her or his own way of life, and this is what we have been born into. It's a blessing most of the time," she said.

The sisters are grateful their dad is in partnership with his brother. This relationship enables them to have every other Sunday free from farm chores and allows them annual vacation time. In fact, the Grove family is spending five days in New York City during the Christmas holidays.

Gro-Lan, which stands for "Grove" and the old spelling of "land," was established in 1918, when Jeff's grandfather purchased the farm. Jeff and his brother Jay established a partnership in 1977. His grandfather died about 10 years ago, but his grandmother continues to help on the farm when needed. Their Aunt Esther, who lives nearby, often helps with the cooking and laundry.

Although Emily and Laura are only 19 months apart and involved in many of the same activities, sibling rivalry is of little consequence. Instead, they freely offer each other advice and help each other out with scheduling conflicts.

Emily was state FFA secretary last year. Her sister is the state sentinel this year. Emily freely shares advice and perspective that Laura finds useful in her duties of visiting FFA chapters across the state.

As the county dairy princess and as state alternate, Emily appreciates that Laura and Renee help with dairy promotion.

"Laura is walking in my footsteps, but leaving her own footprints," Emily said in recognition of her sister's similar choice of activities, but adding her own personal touch.

Emily served as a second-year scholar on the State Legislative FFA Conference, attended Mid-Atlantic Alliance of Cooperatives, and later returned as scholar staff. She was one the state representatives to the National Institute of Cooperative Education Conference, and served as the Pennsylvania agriculture ambassador for young farmers to a conference in Oklahoma City.

Although only 10, Renee is already showing signs of leadership and interest in pursuing FFA and dairy promotion activities.

Of dairy princess promotion, Emily said, "It's awesome to meet so many farmers and learn about their farm operations. And it's a great opportunity working with Carla Martin (state dairy princess) and Pam Werley (first state alternate)."

Emily was named Miss Congeniality and a top award for her presentation at the state pageant.

The whole family extends hospitality to acquaintances who often hang out at the Grove farm. It's a Sunday evening tradition at the Grove family to have friends and relatives drop by for pizza and fellowship.

Emily said, "It started because we are busy milking every other Sunday evening. Our friends come and hang out here while we are cleaning up."

The family is active at Chambersburg Brethren in Christ Church.

"God is number one priority for us, family second, and friends next," Laura said of the family's goals.

"Dad has always taught us to give 100 percent of ourselves," Emily said of their enthusiasm for farming and activities.

Laura and Emily refrain from taking credit for their achievements. Instead, their conversation often includes comments such as "It was God's will" and "If it's meant to be, it will happen."

Both Laura and Emily are unsure of definite careers.

"I know I want to stay in agriculture, but I'm not sure where school will lead," Laura said of her plan to study ag business management at Penn State.

"Ag is so broad, and offers so many opportunities," Emily said. She is finishing a term in ag business at Penn State Mont Alto Campus and plans to take off the next semester to devote to dairy princess responsibilities. By that time, she expects to have a more defining career in mind.

(Turn to Page B7)

Who would think you could laugh with your father at 3 a.m. in the milking parlor? Emily said of the camaraderie that exists among family members. From left are Laura, Emily, their Uncle Jay Grove, and their dad, Jeff.

She said, "A lot of my teammates are going for ag education. I respect my teachers and know they have helped me tremendously, but I don't think that teaching is for me."

Emily has used her English and speech college classes to write and speak about farming.

"Education is the key. So many don't realize where food comes from," she said of her efforts to communicate modern-day farming.

Her college classmates and professors respond favorably to her "farm education" speeches.

Laura said that riding on the school bus during high school, she'd often overhear classmates complain about farm odors. To counteract her classmates' false impression of "dirty old farmers," Laura, for a class project, took photos of the family's milking parlor and dairy operation to show how farmers are required to meet regulations and keep clean facilities.

The Grove farm is definitely not dirty. The spacious, up-to-date facilities are extremely clean and neat.

The eight carousel milking parlor is used to milk 160 cows. The barn under construction will be a 186x113-foot freestall barn.

Jeff is involved in the Young Farmers of America, Shippensburg Chapter. He is a regional delegate for Genex, dairy farmer spokesperson for Mid-Atlantic Dairy Farmers, and member of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and Chamber of Commerce, and Land O' Lakes future leaders. He is on the board for the Christian Retreat Center, a church organization for youth and young people in preparation for the mission field. He and his wife are co-team Sunday school teachers. Jeff also helps with community tractor pulls, rodeos, and other ag events.

Linda said that she did not grow up on a dairy farm, and was initially amazed at the commitment required to dairy farm. She has grown to enjoy being involved in the farm activities.

In addition to her Agway job as a feed nutritionist, Linda serves as county dairy princess chairperson and is always looking for new recipes.

Here is a recipe that is popular in the Grove kitchen during holiday baking times.

Holiday Seven Layer Bars

¼ cup butter, melted
2 cups graham cracker crumbs
1½ cups sweetened flaked coconut
16-ounces red and green candy-coated chocolate pieces
2 (4-ounce) white baking bars, broken into pieces
1½ cups lightly salted roasted cashew pieces
14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Line 15x10x1-inch jelly-roll pan with aluminum foil.

Pour melted butter into prepared pan. Add graham cracker crumbs; stir to combine. Press crumbs into bottom of pan. Sprinkle with coconut, chocolate pieces, white baking bar pieces, and cashews in crumbs. Drizzle with sweetened condensed milk.

Bake for 20-25 minutes or until lightly browned and bubbly in center. Cool completely. Remove using foil. Cut into squares.

Yields: 60 bars.

Diabetic Cake Decorating Icing

½ pint cream
Pinch salt
1 tablespoon white grape juice concentrate
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 8-ounce packages cream cheese, room temperature
2 tablespoons powdered milk, approximately

'Tis The Season

'Tis the season to be short on time, short on money, short on patience, and in my case, short on good decisions!

In a moment of weakness we allowed our 11-year-old to sign up for a craft booth at our local high school Holiday Farmer's Market. Katrina's convincing ways led us to believe that this was a "do-able" project for an 11-year-old. More fun than selling her craft wares to her brother, sister and parents, Katrina felt this was an excellent opportunity!

What sounded fine two months ago is now a stressful reality as the fair will be held soon and we are not yet ready. As the county music song goes, "What were we thinking?"

Actually we were thinking about all the things Katrina could learn through this venture. She has learned record keeping, time management, display skills, pricing, profit margins, crafting skills and most importantly she has gained quite a bit of self confidence.

As you and your families are now fully engaged in the hustle and bustle of the holiday season, I hope you are making sound decisions on family routines and activities to reduce your holiday stress (unlike me).

Here are some ways to deal with holiday stress: Concentrate on people instead of objects. For example, it's more important to have fun making cookies than to have beautiful cookies. Children will remember that they helped make the holiday cookies, not whether they were perfect.

Prepare children for holiday visits by sharing photos of family members they may not have seen for a long time. Talk about who is going to be present and help children remember names. Plan celebrations during children's best coping time of the day.

Let children be part of the festivities by sharing in the responsibilities such as picking up toys, setting the table, and so forth. Even a five-year-old can wrap presents. They may not be picture perfect and they may be hard on the tape but they are a part of the festivities.

Incorporate quiet times during your day. Soft slow music, quiet, cuddly stories, or a walk outside may help you and your child's activity and anxiety levels go down. Schedule activities over several days so all the excitement doesn't get overwhelming for everyone.

Be selective about the activities you choose to involve yourself in. Choose those which are important to you and your family.

Try to have regular, sit-down meals and improve your nutrition. Slow down rather than eating on the run. Avoid tasks or people that anger or irritate you, or change your attitude about them.

Don't expect anything to come off as planned. A child may develop the flu, the electricity may go off in the middle of your holiday dinner or a storm may prevent relatives from visiting.

Real people and real families are not perfect. Don't expect yours to be.

May you and your family enjoy your holiday experiences. Remember that 'Tis the season to be realistic about what you can accomplish.

Happy Holidays!

Santa Claus Powered By Calcium

ABBEY PUZO
Susquehanna Dairy Ambassador

Have you ever wondered how Santa Claus keeps up with his many busy days of the year?

Let me tell you a little secret that he shared with me. Santa includes lots of calcium in his daily diet.

Here is what he ate on the day he told me this wonderful calcium secret. For breakfast he enjoyed a peanut butter banana smoothie. For lunch he had a grilled ham and cheese sandwich with tomato soup. Then for supper he had delicious mac-n-cheese. With all of his meals he enjoys a glass of cold milk. Before he went to bed he had cookies and milk as a bedtime snack.

Santa told me he encourages everyone to include as much calcium as possible in their diet. As a Susquehanna County Dairy Ambassador I also encourage you to eat 3-A-Day of Dairy.

Here are Santa's yummy recipes.

Happy Holidays!

PEANUT BUTTER BANANA SMOOTHIE

2 frozen bananas cut up
2 tablespoons creamy peanut butter
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash of cinnamon

Put everything in your blender and blend until smooth.

TOMATO-BASIL SOUP

8 plum tomatoes or 16 ounce can of tomatoes drained
1 medium onion chopped
1 tablespoon of olive oil
2 cloves garlic crushed 1 pinch of ground red pepper
1 tablespoon fresh basil or 1 teaspoon of dried basil
2 cups milk

Skin tomatoes, cut tomatoes in half and remove the seeds. Cook the onion in olive oil until golden brown. Add the garlic and cook about 1 minute. Add the tomatoes. Cook uncovered on medium heat for twenty minutes. Blend the veggies until smooth. Add the remaining ingredients and cook over low until hot. Do not boil. Garnish with fresh basil.

OATMEAL CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES

1 cup butter softened
1¼ firmly packed brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
1 egg
2 tablespoons milk
2 teaspoons vanilla
1¼ cups flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
2½ cups Quick Quaker Oats
1 12-ounce package chocolate chips
1 cup walnuts (optional)

Beat together the butter and sugars until creamy. Add eggs, milk and vanilla; beat well. Add flour, baking soda and salt; mix well. Stir in oats, chocolate chips and nuts. Drop by rounded tablespoons on an ungreased cookie sheet. At Christmas time you might like to sprinkle a little green or red sugar on the cookies before making. Bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes. Cool one minute on cookie sheet then remove. Makes 4 dozen cookies.

Fancy Feathers 4-H Club Has Busy Year

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.) — We had a very busy year between the rain drops. In the spring we went to an embryology seminar put on by Penn State's Phillip Clauer. He covered everything on egg development.

He had eggs there of all different stages to let us see the development.

We had a dissection performed at Mt. View School. It was very interesting, especially when we saw an eye of the chicken bigger than the brain. Mr. Slocum did an excellent job of showing us the organs of the chicken.

Fred Cobb took several of the show birds to Honesdale Fairand did very well, taking Champion Clear Colored standard with an Australorp cockerel.

We participated in the 4-H garden/beautification program at the Harford Fair again this year. And this year, the weeds really grewwith all the rain we did not worry about the garden drying out. We planted some perennials last fall, and to our surprise most of them came up. The leaders decided to give a Grand Champion award to Phillip Hartman, who did most of the digging up of the ground to turn over the weeds.

Before the Harford Fair we helped Ron Stiles, Bob Simons, and Robert Powell get the poultry barn ready. Getting the barn ready is a lot of work, with putting on tags , the shavings and the cups.

A special thanks to our judge, Robert Powell, for doing the showmanship and judging our 4-H show. He has helped us out greatly. We don't know what we would do without him. Thanks a million.

Then to top the rest of the fair, we won the blue ribbon (first place) on the flower garden that we planted along the side of the poultry building! The live Sweet Grass and silkies in a pen in the garden display were a big hit with the Fair-going public.

Jessica Sartell showed her birds at the Twin Tier Poultry Show in Bath, N.Y., Sept. 7, and won Junior Grand Champion and Best Mediterranean of the open show with her White faced Black Spanish hen.

Jessica was also named Third Place Showman at the show. Then later in the month of Sept., Jessica showed at the Cobleskill, N.Y. show and took Second Place in Showmanship and received Junior Reserve Champion on a another White Faced Black Spanish hen. It was a great year.

Christmas Is Coming

Christmas time is coming,
There's a lot to do on the farm,
It's time to pull out your winter coats,
And put your long johns on,
The corn is done,
And winter work has just begun,
Mom is milking,
Dad is scraping,
Kids are feeding,
Grandma's baking,
Pies and cakes
With lots of whipped cream,
Custard cups with pralines,
Don't forget the milk and plates
Singing songs of cheer
Holiday hopes brighten thoughts

Keep Holiday Cookies, Eggnog Safe

Cookies and eggnog are a large part of many family holiday traditions. If you make cookies with young children, do not allow them to eat raw cookie dough which contains raw eggs. Eggs may contain Salmonella bacteria which can cause food poisoning. However, if the cookie is baked, the Salmonella bacteria are destroyed.

If your children insist on eating raw cookie dough, purchase the prepared cookie dough found in tubes in the refrigerated section of your grocery store. These batters are prepared with pasteurized egg products which make the raw product safe to eat.

If you prepare your own eggnog, use a recipe which cooks the egg product. Using raw eggs puts you and your guests at risk for Salmonella poisoning. Try this recipe:

BASIC EGGNOG

6 eggs
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 quart milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup whipped topping (optional)

In a large saucepan, beat together eggs, sugar, and salt. Stir in milk. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and just coats a metal spoon. Stir in vanilla. Cool quickly by setting pan in bowl of ice or cold water and stirring for a few minutes. Cover and refrigerate until thoroughly chilled, several hours or overnight. Pour into bowl or pitcher. Fold in whipped topping, if desired.

Lehigh County 4-H Recognizes Auctioneer And Volunteers

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Ralph Zettlemoyer, Fogelsville, was recognized for his contributions to Lehigh County 4-H during the annual 4-H Achievement Night. At the same event one volunteer was recognized for 40 years of service. Others won recognition for 15, 20, and 25 years of service.

Zettlemoyer, an auctioneer, donates his services during the annual 4-H livestock sale at the Allentown Fair. He talks up each animal's qualities. He encourages potential buyers to bid up the price of animals as a way of showing support for the youth who raised the livestock.

When the Partner in 4-H Award was presented to Zettlemoyer, he turned to share his own recollections with the 4-H members present. As a 4-H member many years ago, he raised hogs and grew potatoes among several projects. He also played in the 4-H softball league. Later he was a volunteer leader for the Southern Lehigh Horse and Pony Club and the Tractor Maintenance Club.

Robin Rassler of Lynn Township, a leader for the dairy beef project and a member of the Lehigh County 4-H Development Fund board, presented Zettlemoyer with the award. "His support of the auction every year helps the 4-H members realize the best price for their animals," she said.

Jean Person Brown of South Whitehall Township was awarded a diamond 4-H clover for 40 years of service as a volunteer leader of the Southern Lehigh Horse and Pony 4-H Club. Over the years Brown has seen the club change from one dominated by children with backyard horses to those who board their horses at a stable and take formal riding lessons or who simply love horses but don't have access to one at all. Her club meets at Person's Stable at the corner of Walbert Avenue and Cedar Crest Boulevard.

Ralph Zettlemoyer, Fogelsville, auctioneer, receives Partner in 4-H Award from Robin Rassler, Lehigh County 4-H leader, Kempton. Some members of the Lehigh County livestock clubs and another leader look on.

Ruby Gogel, Neffs, was honored for 25 years of service with the Neffs Cloverettes 4-H Club. Until a few years ago Ruby was happy to help the club with special activities like displays and scrapbooks recording the club's activities. She has recently become the organizational leader of a club that is now coed despite its name from an era when it was a girls' club.

Diane Selig, Germansville, has been a leader for the North Paws Seeing Eye Puppy 4-H Club for 20 years. She continues to raise Seeing Eye puppies herself and to oversee the training of puppies and the organization of this club. The club includes youth and their families who are all helping to raise puppies who will be trained later at the Seeing Eye Foundation headquarters in Morristown, New Jersey, to lead people who are visually impaired.

Bill and Imogene Dietrich, Germansville, have jointly led the 4-H Dairy Calf Club for 15 years. Although the club is small, they challenge every member to learn as much as possible about dairy animals. This club's members regularly participate in dairy judging activities. These activities develop youth's decision-making skills and help them to raise better dairy cows.

Other 4-H volunteers were also recognized for their service to the organization. Ten year veterans are Darlene Wirth, Orefield, currently a volunteer leader for the Lehigh County Country Cabbits 4-H Club, and Bob Soha, Allentown, one of the leaders of the county Shooting Sports 4-H Club.

Five year awards were given to Patty Engler, Allentown, volunteer for the 8th Ward Tropical Jungle Club; Kathy Lichtenwalner of Macungie, volunteer for the Emmaus Sewing 4-H Club; Donna Wolfe of New Tripoli, volunteer for the Lowhill Laurels 4-H club; and Tim Billig, New Tripoli, volunteer for the county 4-H Swine Club.

First year awards were made to Linda Frisby, Allentown, 8th Ward Tropical Jungle club; Julie Lichtenwalner, Coplay, Neffs Cloverettes; Debbie Snyder, A South Paws Seeing Eye Puppy 4-H Club; and John C. Strawbridge, Whitehall, 4-H Sheep Club.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Today I decided to write about life on our farm almost 40 years ago when our six children were all living at home. They ranged in ages from two years to 17 years old. This is what I read in my diary.

It was a very busy time in December 1965. Every day I drove four children to kindergarten and had to pick them up again at noontime. At that time we did not have a freezer but rather kept our vegetables and meat at a local frozen food locker. Our 12-year-old boy liked to bake bread. I was surprised to read that I had made six fruitcakes before Christmas.

We seemed to do more visiting then than we do now. Our children often had friends come to share meals with us. Not too much work got done when other boys came and so some corn lay unharvested in the field.

At that time we replastered a ceiling in our house and then painted it. Repair men had to come and fix the furnace and washing machine. We helped to butcher two big pigs that we bought from a neighbor. We bought snow tires and my husband and an older boy went deer hunting.

It was this month that our oldest daughter was notified that she had a full scholarship to Alfred University in New York state. She was elated and so were we as she had always had her heart set on being a nurse. At this time she could drive a car and help with taking our children to 4-H meetings. She also tutored several boys and girls in other school districts.

That year I canned and froze some 400 quarts of vegetables and fruits from my garden. We didn't have much money, but we had lots of good food to put on the table.

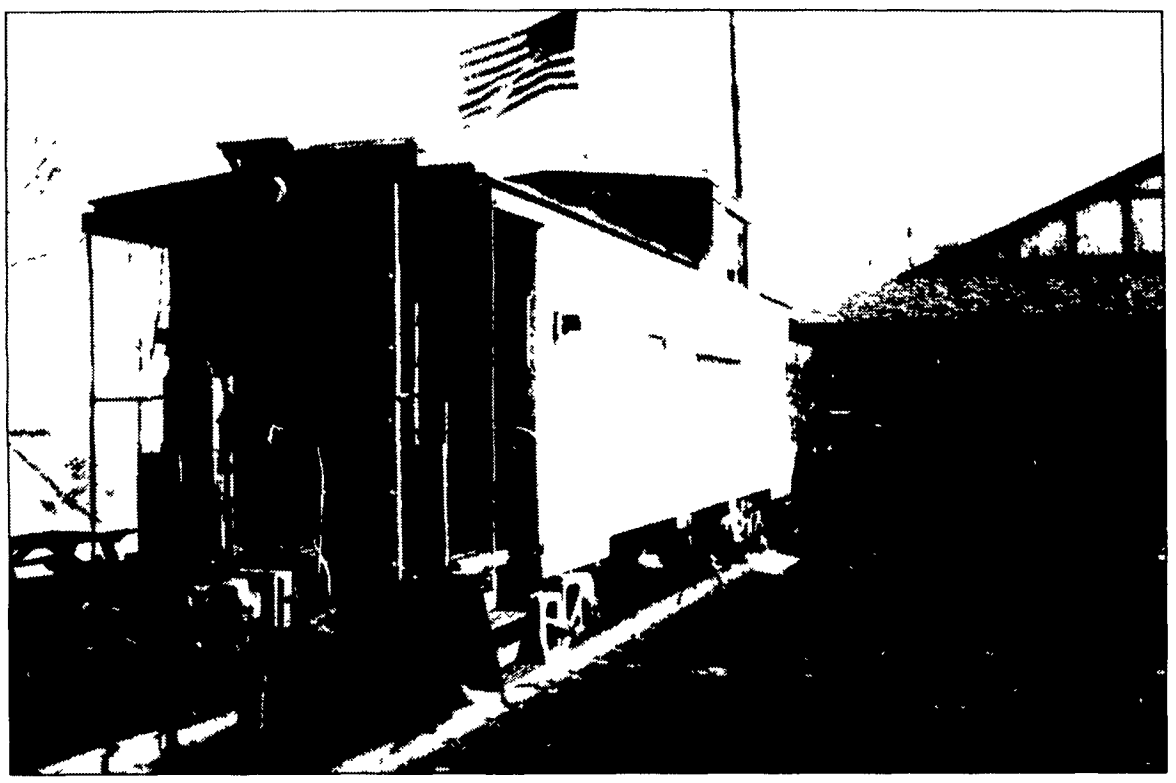
Antiques Center



The Meyersdale Area Historical Society's newest project is restoring a CSX Wide-Vision Caboose, which has been moved to the society's headquarters at the restored Western Maryland Railway Station on the Allegheny Highlands Trail.

Lester and Barbara Breininger, ninth generation Pennsylvania Germans, show a photo of Katie Fox who originally owned the Early American cookie cutters. A traveling tinsmith fashioned the cookie cutters from scrapes leftover from making pots and pans for early Americans. At the holiday workshop sponsored recently by Berks County Extension, the Breiningers shared their collection of items relating to Christmas observances among 18th century Pennsylvania Germans.

Railroad Landmark Restored

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — The Western Maryland Railway Station in Meyersdale serves not only as a restored, historic landmark on the Allegheny Highlands Trail but also its completion has led to more recent projects, including the revival of a caboose.

Ironically, the impressive railway station, open on weekends for travelers on the Allegheny Highlands (hiking and biking) Trail and other tourists, was once on the brink of demolition before 1993, when the restoration began.

"I thought to myself when I first came up here and looked around 'there's no way this is going to work,' but with a lot of volunteer help we just kept going and this is the result," said Mary Neimiller, one of the original members of the Meyersdale Area Historical Society, the organization formed to restore the station.

The once-obsolete and discarded station is now the home of the society as well as many community activities.

The historical society was formed as a non-profit in 1994 to preserve historic structures and encourage awareness of the cultural heritage of southern Somerset County, explained Neimiller. The station now stands as a shining example of local history.

Constructed in 1912 by the Meyersdale Planing Mill for $10,000, the Meyersdale Train Depot was one of several stations along the Western Maryland Railroad. The mill also had contracts to construct depots for the Western Maryland Railway at Rockwood and Confluence in Somerset County, both of which have been demolished, and Ohiopyle in Fayette County, and Garrett in Somerset County, which was dismantled and moved to Listie in Somerset Township.

Although the CSX caboose is not from the original Western Maryland line, its lure is no less significant than that of the station.

After the discontinued use of the Western Maryland railroad line in the 1970s, the Western Maryland Railway Station built in 1912 became an eyesore by the 1990s. After much volunteer effort, the structure has been restored to its original glory.

A conflict between the Western Maryland Railway and the Meyersdale Borough Council resulted in a unique twist of fate back in 1912. The council didn't want to allow the railroad to cross through the town, and the railroad wanted to avoid any expensive right-of-way. The alternative ended up being an agreement that the railroad would be allowed to build if it constructed one of the finest depots along the entire route and it did.

According to Ken Snelson, a committee member for the restoration of the caboose, it was built in April 1969 by the International Car Company in Kenton, Ohio, and is numbered No. 3235. It was among the first acquired by the C&O (Chesapeake and Ohio) since 1949. The Chessie System acquired and painted it in their colors in 1978. However, it was originally painted dark blue with silver window frames, roof and running boards. The letters, numbers, roof ends, stripe along the bottom edge of the car body and grab irons were yellow.

It is the intention of the society to restore the caboose to its original glory and a future fundraiser is currently under consideration as well as the obtaining any possible grant money.

The caboose, much like the railway station, allows the general public to see a part of American history in an area steeped with an industrial heritage.

"Without the railroads, neither industry nor prosperity would have come to Meyersdale or Somerset County for that matter," explained Dennis Stahl, president of the historical society and a retired history teacher.

The Western Maryland line was the second main line through Meyersdale. The need for an additional rail line was apparent due to the extreme amounts of production from local coal mines. The route was popular because it offered a lower grade route from Pittsburgh to Baltimore, Maryland.

The first freight trains, for which the line was most noted, came through in August 1912. The passenger trains followed in October of the same year.

"This station has quite an impressive history and it has had a second life because of the people who worked hard to make it happen," said Stahl.

Ironically, a conflict between the Western Maryland Railway and the Meyersdale Borough Council actually resulted in a unique twist of fate back in 1912. The council didn't want to allow the railroad to cross through the town, and the railroad wanted to avoid any expensive right-of-way. The alternative ended up being an agreement that the railroad would be allowed to build if it constructed one of the finest depots along the entire route and it did.

The brick passenger and freight depot with wide, overhanging eaves and a hipped roof with several small gabled dormers were first restored on the outside. The interior with original wooden walls was restored. The society is in the third phase of the restoration process by constructing an exhibit in the interior rooms for the public to enjoy.

"Right now, the society is completing exhibits in the interior rooms of the station, and we are looking forward to the restoration of the caboose as well to add to the historical significance here in this area," said Neimiller. "I can see the potential of this station as a major draw from D.C. and Pittsburgh."

According to Stahl, the station's guest book had 1,500 signatures this year alone and that doesn't count the Christmas season.

The station is situated on the biking trail between two historic viaducts incorporated into the recreational pathway of the Allegheny Highlands Trail. In addition, the Big Savage Tunnel, located outside of Meyersdale on the trail, will serve as a major draw and will be completed next year. Because of the attraction of these structures it is anticipated by the Rails to Trails Association that this region will experience the most activity of the Great Allegheny Passage.

"We've come a long way," said Stahl, "but we anticipate an active future as the exhibit is installed, the trail nears completion and the caboose is restored. It's an exciting time for the society as well as the community and Somerset County."

Vermont Producers Top Silage Division at Forage Analysis Superbowl

MADISON, Wis — Clarendon, Vt., proved to be the winner's circle for two silage producers who recently claimed top honors at the World's Forage Analysis Superbowl in Madison, Wis.

Ted Grembowicz, Clarendon, Vt., earned first place in the World's Forage Analysis Superbowl in the Dairy Corn Silage division while Cash Ruane of N Clarendon, Vt., was awarded the grand champion first time entrant in the contest Both winners planted Mycogen Seeds 1407 brown mid-rib (BMR) hybrid

"The F407 BMR hybrid offers higher digestibility with a lower lignin content, which results in more energy available to the cow," said Grembowicz. "I have used BMR hybrids for the past five years and they've helped me raise milk production in my herd by 4 to 5 pounds per cow per day and also allowed me to decrease grain costs."

Grembowicz Farm milks 75 Holsteins with a 24,500 pound rolling herd average and raises grain corn, grass hay, corn silage, and soybeans on 650 acres

The Grand Champion First Time Entrant, Cash Ruane, has planted Mycogen Seeds Full-Time " Forage hybrids for the past three years.

"I got higher digestibility and more feed consumption in my herd after using Mycogen Full-Time silage hybrids," said Ruane. "Right away the higher dry matter intake led to increased milk production from my cows "

The C Ruane Farm operation consists of Cash, his wife, Karen, and his daughter, Katie, a high school senior. They own 127 cows with a milking string of 58. Most of the herd are Holsteins, with 10 percent Brown Swiss. Ruane farms 189 acres raising grass hay, high moisture shell corn, BMR corn silage and soylage (soybeans as forage).

Mycogen hybrids swept all 20 of the top 20 corn silage division placings in the 2003 World s Forage Analysis Superbowl. This is the fifth consecutive year the company's hybrids have earned the title of Grand Champion Silage Hybrid.

Hybrid Alfalfa Wins Dairy Haylage Honors

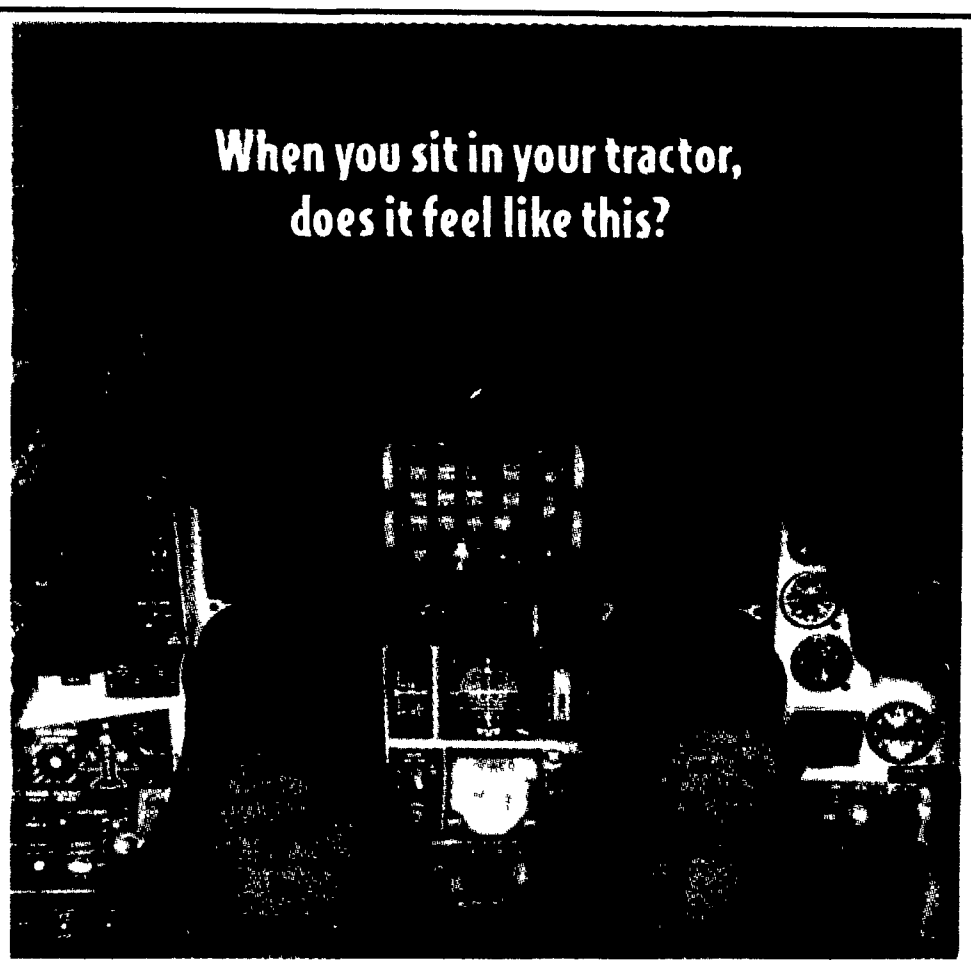
MADISON, Wis. — For 20 years, the Worlds Forage Analysis Superbowl has wowed World Dairy Expo visitors from around the world. This year's anniversary event was no exception.

The Dairy Haylage sample submitted by Cross Farms, LLC of Winneconne, WI, caught the attention of the official judges and expo visitors alike. The sample was from a cutting of Hybriforce-400, the world first hybrid alfalfa from Dairyland Seed Company.

The relative feed value of the hybriforce-400 haylage was 266 RFV, the relative feed quality was 288 RFQ, and the milk per ton was calculated at 3,587 pounds. Dairy division samples are judged on lab analysis (60 percent), visual inspection (20 percent), herd production information (10 percent), and calculated milk per ton (10 percent).

Another grand champion title was awarded to Dick and Powell Farm in Cordell, Okla. Their entry of Magnum V alfalfa was judged to be the best commercial hay at the forage event.

When you sit in your tractor, does it feel like this?



Hey, it's farming, not air-to-air combat.

As complex as some of the larger tractor controls are getting, you have to wonder what some manufacturers are thinking

Fortunately, clearer thinking prevails at Massey Ferguson We work hard to make sure the controls on our MF 6200 and MF 8200 Series tractors are easy to work and easy to understand So you get your work done quickly and efficiently

You have bugs, weeds, diseases, and market prices to deal with Why should you have to fight with your tractor?

Shaver Manufacturing's new log splitter.

Shaver Introduces Two New Log Splitters

GRAETTINGER, Iowa — As fuel prices for home heating have skyrocketed, people are looking for more affordable ways to keep their homes warm this year. Shaver Manufacturing is doing its part by introducing two new log splitters designed to help keep homeowners warm and pocketbooks from going empty.

The new shaver SL-2030-T and SL-2030-S Log Splitters eliminate the back-breaking work of manually splitting wood by slicing through cords of logs in almost no time. The units also virtually eliminate the added labor of loading logs onto the splitter platform.

Both units feature a unique three-way splitter configuration that allows the operator to choose between ground-level, waist-level or vertical setups. This is especially useful when loading the splitter from a truck or from a tall stack of logs, or when the logs to be split are too large or bulky to carry. Switching between each configuration is as easy as pulling a hinge pin.

SL-2030-T Three-Point Log Splitter is built for rugged use on all types of farms. The unit is powered by a tractor with a category I or II hitch and a minimum of 2000 psi. The splitter is operated from a lever at the side of the unit, so all log loading and splitting can erasily be done by a single operator.

The SL-2030-S Skid Steer Log Splitter is powered with a minimum 2000 psi. The unit is built for farms, rental operations and contractors. Mounted to a universal bracket, this unit also allows for easy one-person operation with a simple hydraulic lever.

New Holland's TZ Sub-Compact Tractors Can Do Many Jobs

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — When mowing is only the first thing on a long "to-do" list, New Holland's TZ18DA and TZ24DA Boomer™ sub-compact tractors are the perfect work mates. With the power to handle just about any implement — from a snow blower to a tiller to a front-end loader — these sub-compact tractors are so much more than just a "lawn and garden" tractor.

Dependable three-cylinder, 18- or 24-horsepower diesel engines provide plenty of power for all kinds of jobs. The TZ24DA has the most engine horsepower of any sub-compact tractor on the market.

Both models have two PTO's to power front- and rear-mounted implements. A mid PTO (2,200 rmp) and rear PTO (540 rpm) and a 700-pound lift, three-point hitch permit operation of power rotary tillers, snow blowers, rotary cutters, blades, front-end loaders and more.

TZ tractors are easy to operate with an automatic transmission, separate forward and reverse foot pedals that don't require clutching, and power steering. There's plenty of legroom, and the color-coded controls are conveniently placed. A cruise control option is available to maintain a constant working speed.

Boomer sub-compact tractors are easy to maintain.

Dal'Bairn Farm Honored With Historic Angus Herd Award

CARLISLE, N.Y. — Dal-'bairn Farm, Carlisle, N.Y., has been honored by the American Angus Association with the organization's Historic Angus Herd Award for their continued ownership and production of Angus cattle.

The farm is owned and operated by the Fletcher family. The Dal'bairn herd traces its roots back to breeders like Carlton Fancher and Henry Jackson. Bulls of the past, such as Bandolier of Anoka 7 and Briarcliff Barbarian, can be found in the herd's pedigree.

Dale Fletcher started the herd with stock he received as a gift from Bethel Farms. The Fletchers became Angus members in 1952, and to this day have registered Angus. Today, William Fletcher, along with his son Mark and grandson Matthew, manage the herd.

The Historic Angus Herd Award is presented to active members of the Association who own a herd that has been in the continuous production of registered Angus cattle for 50 years or more by the same person or members of the immediate family. The Fletchers have been presented a certificate, which has been signed by the president of the Association, to recognize this achievement.

Operational Timeliness

Delayed planting can dramatically affect yields The Case-IH 1200 Planters allow you to run at higher ground speeds and increase productivity without compromising accuracy

Seed Placement Accuracy

The Advanced Seed Meter (ASM) utilizes a larger diameter disc that turns slowly and gives a more accurate and consistent seed drop The Case-IH 1200 Planters also deliver superior spacing with all seed sizes

SRBC Urges Congress To Restore Funding For Susquehanna System

NORTH EAST, Md. —The Susquehanna River Basin Commission (SRBC) recently approved a resolution calling on the U.S. Congress to restore funding for the Susquehanna Flood Forecasting and Warning System (System).

The U.S. House of Representatives Nov. 25 unexpectedly eliminated the $1.3 million appropriation for the System, while instructing the National Weather Service (NWS) to fund the Susquehanna System out of the agency's budget.

The SRBC commissioners — representing the federal government and the states of New York, Pennsylvania, and Maryland — cited the risks of consolidating the Susquehanna System's funding into the NWS budget. The SRBC resolution (No. 2003 — 12) states, "This action by the U.S. House forces the System to compete with the nationwide demands placed on the NWS budget and is therefore likely to result in a reduction in the level of funding for the System, further compromising its already tenuous finances."

SRBC Executive Director Paul Swartz noted that the Susquehanna River Basin is one of the most flood-prone watersheds in the entire country, with average annual flood damages totaling nearly $150 million.

The Susquehanna River Basin Flood Forecasting and Warning System, which has been in operation for 17 years, is a technological system that uses radar and a network of stream and rain gages to provide the data that are used to forecast river levels and issue more accurate early flood warnings.

"We can not stress enough the importance of this System to the Susquehanna basin," said Swartz. "In 2003, alone, six people have lost their lives to flooding. Early warnings give people and businesses the time they need to secure their property and then get themselves out of harm's way."

Swartz said, "The Susquehanna System is an extremely cost-effective flood protection measure, reducing the average annual flood damages in the Susquehanna basin by $32 million. That represents a 20-to-1 benefit-cost ratio. For every dollar invested by the federal government, the System saves $20 through reduced flood damages and reduced payouts through the federal flood insurance program."

While the SRBC resolution calls for the line-item appropriation to be restored as the first course of action, if that proves unsuccessful for FY-04, SRBC is calling on: (1) the National Weather Service to fully fund the $1.3 million for the Susquehanna System from the agency's FY-04 budget, as directed in the House Consolidated Appropriations Act; and (2) the federal government to restore the appropriation for the Susquehanna System in FY-05 and subsequent fiscal years.

CNH Reports Improved Third Quarter

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — CNH Global N.V. has reported a third quarter net loss of $36 million, substantially better than the net loss of $66 million for the same period last year.

Excluding restructuring charges in both periods, CNH's third quarter bottom line was a net loss of $15 million, compared to a third quarter 2002 loss of $58 million. Net sales of equipment were up 12% in the quarter, driven by strong sales of the company's agricultural equipment across all major markets.

For the first nine months of 2003, CNH reported a net loss of $46 million, or $.35 per share, compared to a net loss of $401 million for the same period last year. Excluding restructuring charges and the cumulative effect of a change in accounting principle in 2002 related to goodwill impairment, CNH's profit of $1 million in the first nine months of 2003 compares favorably to a loss of $59 million for the same period in 2002.

Net sales of equipment in the period were $7.386 billion, compared to $6.920 billion for the first nine months of 2002.

"Our new agricultural products are driving share gains in our key markets, directly benefiting the bottom line," Paolo Monferino, CNH president and chief executive officer said. "Although the third quarter is typically the weakest quarter of the year, we achieved an industrial operating margin of $72 million on a GAAP basis.

Looking ahead, our construction equipment business has turned the corner and should be at breakeven in the fourth quarter. Overall, we confirm our forecast to be in the black, on a GAAP basis, before restructuring charges, in 2003."

Net sales of agricultural equipment increased to $1.684 billion for the quarter, compared to $1.429 billion in the third quarter of 2002. Net of favorable currency, net sales of agricultural equipment increased by 10%, reflecting the company's strong sales in the Americas and Western Europe.

Third quarter 2003 industry unit sales of agricultural equipment in North America improved substantially compared to the third quarter of 2002. In North America, industry sales improved across all tractor segments with the greatest gains in the under 40 horsepower segment. North American combine sales also increased significantly.

In Europe, industry sales of tractors were essentially flat, while industry sales of combines declined significantly. Industry sales of tractors were down slightly in Latin America while combine sales rose significantly.

CNH believes that industry sales of agricultural equipment in the fourth quarter of 2003 should be flat to up slightly in North America. In Western Europe industry sales of tractors are expected to decline, while combine sales in Latin America are expected to increase significantly through the balance of the year.

Pioneer Introduces 40 New Corn Hybrids Offering The Roundup Ready™ Trait

DES MOINES, Iowa — Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., has announced the introduction of 40 new Pioneer brand corn hybrids containing the Roundup Ready™ gene. This technology allows postemergence application of Roundup™-branded herbicides without crop injury or stress.

The hybrids range from 77 to 116 comparative relative maturity. Most are conversions of tried-and-true yield-leading hybrids with which growers are familiar. Several also offer in-plant protection from European corn borer and other insect pests. Supplies of some of the newly released products, however, will be limited, and growers should contact their local Pioneer representative for information on products available in their areas and suited to their individual farms.

"Finding a hybrid with the genetics and yield potential that fits the agronomic needs of a particular farm or field should be a grower's first consideration," says Kyle Whitaker, Pioneer corn technology launch manager. "Pioneer's local seed representatives know what situations growers in their area face. They can help identify the right hybrid and advise whether the Roundup Ready system is the right choice, based on weed challenges, desired application timing and other considerations."

Pioneer now offers a total of nearly 50 hybrids and more than 60 soybean varieties with the Roundup Ready gene and will continue to expand its product lineup with products to meet grower demand.

"Growers obviously recognize value from the Roundup Ready herbicide program," says Paul Carter, agronomist and global agronomy sciences manager at Pioneer. "However, we all need to realize there is no one-size-fits-all herbicide program. Rotating herbicide modes of action, using two-pass programs and tank-mixing products to broaden efficacy and deliver residual control are all sound weed-management strategies that can be applied to meet specific weed challenges."

To assist growers, Pioneer has developed a full spectrum of management recommendations for growers using Roundup-branded herbicides in crop rotation programs involving corn and soybeans with the Roundup Ready gene.

Metal Roofs aren't Created Equal

Everlast II is better:
- it is galvanized heavier, like old times.
- it is heat formed, less paint cracks.
- is cut while hot, prevents early edge rust.
- won't scratch as easy, paint is harder
- won't bend or buckle as easily, stronger design
- laps are tighter, and virtually invisible.
- nails/screws seal better, ribs fit tighter to head
- zinc phosphate, not chromate under paint.
- still priced about the same or less.
- picked up or deliver from Lebanon plant

Everlast II is excellent for houses and barns.
Standing seam is ideal for houses.

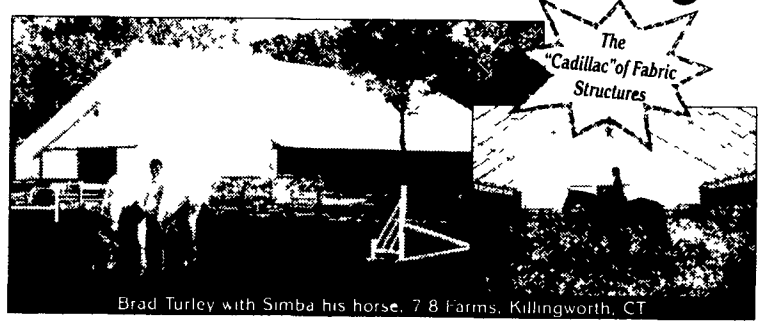
You must hear what Brad says:



Brad Turley with Simba his horse, T B Farms, Killingworth, CT

"I couldn't be more pleased with my riding arena!

(And my neighbors are talking, too!)"

"I knew what I wanted and I found it! After extensive research I knew I needed a fabric structure from We Cover The facts that made my decision were:

"The Engineering – when I saw their heavy built trusses
"The Lighting – I can ride my horse in the natural light
"The Design – The building is designed like a building should be
"The Ventilation – The side curtains excellent air movement

My local building engineer is so impressed he says he will never again recommend a traditional building for an indoor riding arena

"I recommend you call We Cover today!"

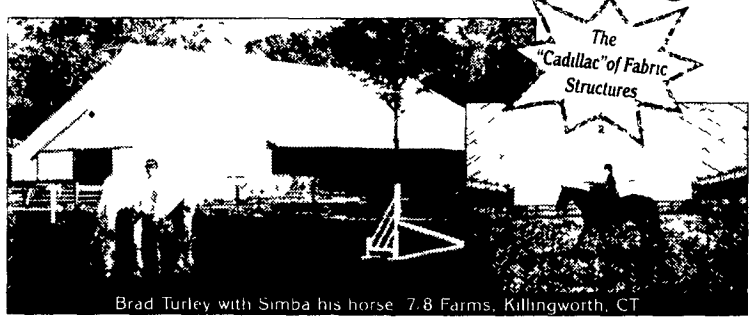
You must hear what Brad says:



Brad Turley with Simba his horse 7-8 Farms, Killingworth, CT

"I couldn't be more pleased with my riding arena!

(And my neighbors are talking, too!)"

'I knew what I wanted and I found it! After extensive research I knew I needed a fabric structure from We Cover The facts that made my decision were

"The Engineering – when I saw their heavy built trusses

"The Lighting – I can ride my horse in the natural light

"The Design – The building is designed like a building should be

"The Ventilation – The side curtains excellent air movement

"My local building engineer is so impressed, he says he will never again recommend a traditional building for an indoor riding arena

"I recommend you call We Cover today!"

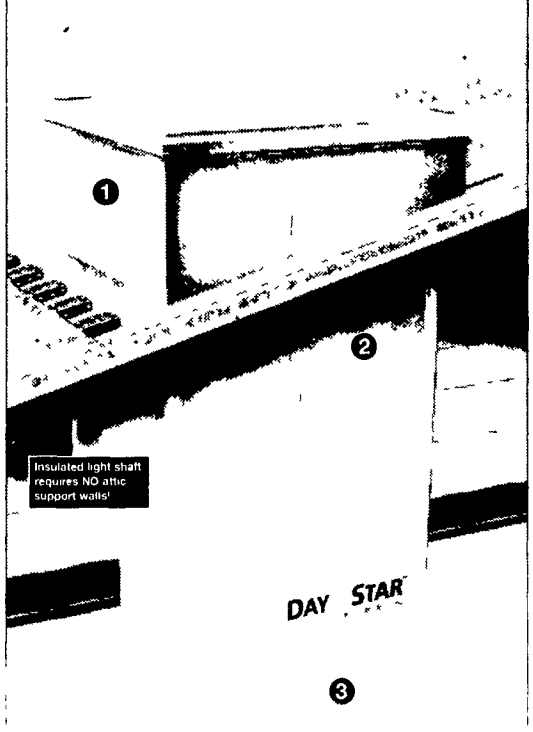
A Breakthrough in Natural Lighting

The right skylighting system can cut a building's energy costs while creating a more pleasant environment, replacing harsh artificial light with full-spectrum natural sunlight.

With DayStar natural lighting is brighter and more cost effective than ever before Specially designed DayStar systems amplify sunlight and diffuse it throughout the room filling it with brilliant natural light even on cloudy days! DayStar s advanced design is available in 4'x4 2 x4' and 2 x2' sizes fits most any roof pitch or roof type and provides far more light than standard skylights And DayStar systems have a minimal effect on the building s temperature, so savings on electricity won t be wasted on increased cooling costs Easily installed in both residential and commercial structures such as shops offices retail stores showrooms, paint rooms warehouses homes and more



HOW IT WORKS

Sunlight is gathered with a specially designed inverted parabolic dome Its rays are amplified by the ultra reflective lining of the light chamber When the sunlight reaches the ceiling lens the highly concentrated light is diffused in a heart shaped pattern by side light panels

1 ROOF CURBS

Insulated roof curbs are made of galvanized steel with continuously welded watertight seams

2 LIGHT SHAFT

Our light shaft is designed to maximize daylight to your space using an insulated sandwich panel with a highly reflective interior

3 CEILING LENS

Extra deep pan design allows light to spread sideways and reflect down from the ceiling

Choose from full spectrum lenses for lighting similar to outdoor sunshine or standard white lenses for soft white light
